STALLIONS.

EDWARD EVERETT FOR 1872.
I have the pleasure to announce that I have renewed arrangements with Mr. Bonner to have Edward Everett (formerly known as Major Winfield) stand at my place, the Lagrange Farm, near Goshen, in Orange county, beginning on the 1st of April, 1872.
Terms, Without any Exception, $200, payable invariably before service, $100 of which will be returned if the mare does not prove with foal.
Edward Everett was sired by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam by imported Margrave.
Edward Everett sired Joe Elliott, who trotted the fastest mile ever made by a six-year-old—2:15¾. He is also the sire of Commodore Vanderbilt's Mountain Boy, who, when seven years old, trotted in 2:20¾; of Judge Fullerton, who at six years old trotted at Buffalo in 2:25¼; of the Stratton filly that was sold recently for $4,500; of the Kilpatrick mare, the Marshall colt, the McGrath colt, the Packer colt, Mr. Low's colt and many more.
I will keep all brood mares at $3 a month for grass and $1 a bushel for any grain which the owners request to have fed to them. All accidents and escapes at the risk of the owner. All letters respecting this horse must be addressed to the subscriber at Goshen, Orange county, New York.
WM. H. KEETCH.
N. B.—Dexter, who, when only 3 years old, trotted in 2:16—the fastest mile ever trotted by any horse in the world—was got by the sire of Edward Everett; Startle, who, when 3 years old, trotted in 2:36, carrying a 200 lb. driver, was got by the sire of Edward Everett; Bruno, who, when 4 years old, trotted in 2:30, was got by the sire of Edward Everett; and Jay Gould, who, when 7 years old, trotted in 2:22, was got by the sire of Edward Everett. All these horses, except Jay Gould, are owned by Mr. Bonner. Edward Everett not only gets extraordinary trotters himself, but it will be seen from the foregoing statement that he belongs to the greatest trotting family in the world.

GEORGE WILKES AND HONEST ALLEN.
The two fastest trotting stallions in the world will stand for a limited number of mares, at the stock farm of Wm. M. Kitzmer, Central avenue, three-quarters of a mile above McComb's Dam Bridge, and opposite Arcularius Hotel. George Wilkes, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, will serve for $150 for the season. Honest Allen, best son of the celebrated Ethan Allen, will serve for $100 for the season. Season commencing April 1, 1872, and ending August 1, 1872. For services of the above horses payable in advance. Good stabling and pasturage for mares. All accidents at owner's risk.

THE EFFECT ON THE STOCK LIST

Money Easier—Gold Steady—Governments Unchanged—The State Bonds Neglected.

WALL STREET,
MONDAY, March 25, 1872—6 P. M.

On 'Change to-day wheat was dull and firm. The cotton market was quiet and steady.

MONEY EASY.

The money market was easy and the rate on call declined to 6 per cent. Early in the day a sceptical feeling as to the continuance of the relaxation noted last week started borrowers out early, and some of them paid 7 per cent, coin, for what they wanted. But the supply became better as the day advanced, and, after a full supply at 7 per cent, lenders were offering money at the close at as low as 6 per cent. The market was as easy to the dealers in government bonds, but the dulness in this department of business created little new inquiry for money, and loans were allowed to stand over at 7 per cent.

Paper was quoted 7 a 12 per cent discount for the several grades of prime bankers' and commercial notes and acceptances.

DECLINE IN FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

The foreign exchanges were weak under a heavy offering of bills by the foreign bankers drawn chiefly against purchases of Erie for the London market. Sterling declined ¼ per cent. The following were the quotations at the close:—Sterling, sixty days, commercial, 108¾ a 109; do. good to prime bankers', 109¼ a 109¼, do. short sight, 109¾ a 110; Paris, sixty days, 5.25 a 5.20; do., short sight, 5.16¼ a 5.15; Prussian thalers, 72 a 72¼; Antwerp, 5.23¾ a 5.20; Switzerland, 5.23¾ a 5.20; Hamburg, 35¾ a 36¼; Amsterdam, 40¾ a 41⅛; Frankfort, 40⅞ a 41¼; Bremen, 78¾ a 79.

GOLD 109¼ A 109⅜.

The gold market opened 109⅜ bid, but the demand at this price was immediately supplied by the foreign bankers, who were selling gold against shipments of Erie, and the quotation settled to 109¼ a 109⅜, at which and the intermediate sixteenth the rest of the day's business was conducted. The market was quiet and featureless. In loans of cash gold the rate varied from six per cent for carrying to flat for borrowing. The Sub-Treasury paid out $956,000 in redemption of the called bonds of '62. The operations of the Gold Exchange Bank were as follows:—Gold cleared, $20,870,000; gold balances, $2,133,000; currency balances, $2,353,217.

GOVERNMENTS STEADY.

Government bonds were quiet and rigidly steady, closing as follows:—United States currency sixes, 115 a 115¼; do. sixes, 1881, registered, 114⅝ a 114⅞; do. do. coupon, 115¼ a 115½; do., five-twenties, registered, May and November, 111⅞ a 112; do. do., 1862, coupon, do., 111⅞ a 112; do. do., 1864, do. do., 111⅞ a 112; do. do., 1865, do. do., 112⅜ a 112½; do. do., 1867, registered, January and July, 111⅞ a 112; do. do., 1865, coupon, do., 110⅞ a 111; do. do., 1867, do. do., 112⅜ a 112½; do. do., 1868, do. do., 112⅜ a 112½; do. fives of 1881, funded, registered, 109⅜ a 109½; do. do. do., coupon, 109⅜ a 109½; do. ten-forties, registered, 107⅜ a 107½; do. do., coupon, 107⅞ a 108⅛.

SOUTHERN SECURITIES IRREGULAR.

The Southern list was dull and generally heavy. The new South Carolinas were exceptionally strong and moderately active, with an advance to 39¾ a 40. The following were the closing prices:—Tennessee, ex coupon, 67¾ a 67¾; do. new, 67¾ a 67¾; Virginia ex coupon, 54 a 56; do. registered stock, old, 45 a 50; do. sixes, consolidated bonds, 58¾ a 59; do. sixes, deferred scrip, 16 a 17; Georgia sixes, 74 a 78; do. sevens, 88 a 90; North Carolina, ex coupon, 37 a 37½; do. funding, 1866, 27 a 30; do. do. 1868, 22 a 24; do., new, 23 a 24; do., special tax, 15 a 17; Missouri sixes, 95¼ bid; do. Hannibal and St. Joseph, 92¾ bid; Louisiana sixes, 59 a 62; do. new, 55 a 60; do. levee sixes, 60 a 66; do. do. eights, 70 a 80; do. do. eights, 1875, 73 a 84; do. penitentiary sevens, 63 a 67; do. railroad eights, 70 a 80; Alabama fives, 62 a 65; do. eights, 90 a 94; do. eights, Montgomery and Eufaula Railroad, 80 a 90; South Carolina sixes, 52 a 55; do. new, January and July, 39¼ a 39¾; do. do., April and October 37 a 37½; Arkansas sixes, funded, 54¾ a 57; do. sevens, Little Rock and Fort Scott issue, 60 a 65.

THE ERIE EXCITEMENT—STOCKS STRONG AND ACTIVE.

A fresh sensation was reserved for Erie even after the capacity of that stock for a further advance had been generally ignored, if not discredited. But, as already explained in this column, the real market for Erie is in London, and not in New York. It should be remembered that during the last five years of the history of the road a large majority of the share capital has been held on the other side of the Atlantic, the immense wealth of the Old World readily and quietly absorbing the Fisk-Gould issues until some effort at protection was made in the restriction of dealings to the certificates carrying the stamped ticket of the famous London committee. In explanation of the fresh rise in Erie in London this morning, where the price opened at 45 as against 42¾ on Saturday night, it is said that the previous advance had already made the fortunes of thousands of speculators in that market, and inspired a speculative mania which has been seldom equalled in the history of the phlegmatic population of the "tight little island." We are left as yet in the dark as to the extent and details of the Erie speculation in England and Europe generally, the cable bringing us only the meagre figures of the quotations at certain regular intervals of the day; but there is little doubt there is more excitement over Erie in the Old World than there is in the New, the fortunes already made tempting the lucky ones to fresh ventures and arousing the cupidity of thousands of others, who think it may not yet be too late to get a share of the wealth to be made by buying the stock. Technical matters also assist the revival of the speculation in London. The purchases now are mostly for the middle of April, the business previously having been generally done for the close of March, the settling day for which will be Wednesday next, owing to the string of holidays at the end of the week. On this side of the Atlantic the populace—the "fools"—have been the lucky ones, like the masses in England, and the victims have been the professional class who have sold Erie step by step as it rose until they have been forced by lack of further means, or by a sudden conversion of their opinions, into buying and closing their interest. The American speculators have been beaten all around, and it was their purchases which helped the rise on the Stock Exchange to day. The victims belong to all parts of the country, the impression having gone around generally that the road was enormously in debt and would be discovered to be bankrupt when the new directors examined the books. The telegraph wires were busy bringing in orders to protect contracts on the "short" side. Baltimore is credited with enormous losses, at least ten thousand shares of Erie having been bought in this afternoon for the account of the "bears" in that city. It would not be surprising if a worse story could be told for Boston and Philadelphia, but the speculative operations of those cities in the New York market are not so readily traced, owing to the more numerous channels of communication between them. It is suggested that the sudden rise in London for the day from 42½ to 48¾ has been helped also by a desperate effort of the Heath and Raphael party to wrest the balance of power from the McHenry or Atlanta and Great Western party, by buying the stock without stint, both in London and in New York, the first purchase of any moment to-day in this market having been made by the foreign bankers. The earliest price here was 52, from which there was a sudden "jump" to 55, thence a steadier movement to 56¾, a reaction to 55½ and a fresh rise to 59¾, a reaction to 57¾ and thenceforward a rise to 60, at which the last sales were made as the descending shutters of the Stock Exchange closed behind the departing crowd of brokers. The New York market closed fully 1¾ per cent higher than London, an inequality due to the domestic demand, not only for the "bull" side, but to cover speculative sales. The "bears" were forced to buy in, not only by reason of their apprehension of unlimited losses, but through fears of a corner in the domestic market, where more stock may have been bought for Europe than can be delivered. The difficulty of the speculation for a decline is furthermore aggravated by the accumulation of the certificates at the transfer and registration office, as many as 150,000 shares being reported awaiting exchange into the ten share lots, customary in the foreign market. In view of the distress occasioned the banking community, who have to lie out of the money represented by these shares, it would be only proper of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company to increase temporarily their clerical force and expedite the transfers. The general market sympathized more or less with Erie, and some of the little cliques endeavored to fan the excitement in their own favorites; but, while the activity was general, it was too evident that Erie was the great attraction and had followers despite its already exalted quotation. Quicksilver preferred was run up to 54 and the common to 44½. A rise of one to three per cent took place in Wabash, Northwestern, Rock Island, Ohios, Pacific Mail, Boston, Hartford and Erie and St. Paul. Reading and Western Union were neglected and Union Pacific and New York Central exceptionally heavy and weak. A quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent has been declared on New Jersey Central, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, paying April 22, the books closing March 30.

CARL VOGT, OF BRUSSELS.

A Witness to Arrive from Europe Next Saturday—Was Vogt One of the Chevalier's Servants?

Carl Vogt was again before Judge Hogan yesterday morning in the examination room attached to the Tombs Police Court. He came into the room with a colossal smile on his countenance and at once seated himself beside his wife, who, as usual, occupied a chair in a remote corner. On the case being called Assistant District Attorney Sullivan arose and stated that he was unable to go on with the examination, as he had not another witness at hand. On the occasion of the last examination, he said, Mr. Mali, was requested to ascertain by cable whether or not a person had actually sailed from Europe who would be able to identify the stolen bonds, and, perhaps, the prisoner. Mr. Mali had telegraphed, and in reply received a despatch, signed D'Espremont, Chief of Police, Brussels, and stating that "the witness has left." Under these circumstances Mr. Sullivan applied for an adjournment till next Saturday, by which time the desired party will in all probability have arrived.

THE BELGIAN CONSUL,

Mr. Gross, counsel for the prisoner, who has done little in the case but object, again denied His Honor's right to grant Mr. Sullivan's request. His Honor, however, overruled him and granted the postponement.

Mr. Gross then stated that at the last investigation the name of a person who had volunteered some testimony in the case was mentioned, and that he (Gross) would now like to have him produced by remarking that his testimony might either strengthen or considerably weaken the case of the prosecution.

Justice Hogan—There is nothing of the kind before me especially; you objected to the letter being put in evidence, and I therefore cannot entertain the motion.

The party referred to by Mr. Gross wrote a letter to Mr. Sullivan some time last week in which he stated that while on a visit to Brussels, some three years since, he made the acquaintance of Chevalier Du Bois de Bianco; that he saw the prisoner, Vogt—he says his real name is Joseph Strupp—who was a servant of Bianco's, and married a woman with whom the Chevalier was acquainted, with the understanding that he was to receive a pension, which Bianco afterwards refused to pay.

A WIFE BEATER.

Henry Stewart, a colored man, aged [illegible] years, residing in the rear of [illegible] street, was arrested Sunday night by [illegible] of the Eighth precinct, charged with [illegible] beating his wife with a chair, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the female is [illegible] [illegible] several [illegible] arraigned before Justice [illegible] [illegible] committed to answer. [illegible] He stated his wife [illegible] groceries, which [illegible] went out on the [illegible] returning to the house, [illegible] his wife [illegible] the floor. Not [illegible] he seized a chair and [illegible] over her head, of which he is now very repentant.

THE COURTS.

Violation of the Post Office Law—The Jim Irving-Geoghegan Assault Case—An Old Divorce Suit—A Writ of Error in the Tenth Avenue Homicide Case—The Adams Express Company in Court—The Burke-Gardner Will Case—Business of the General Sessions.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Alleged Violation of the Post Office Law.

Before Judge Benedict.

In the case of Robert Burke, convicted of stealing newspapers from the Post Office, Judge Benedict has set aside the verdict of the jury, on the ground that the offence proved was not the offence charged in the indictment, which can be drawn only for stealing a "package," while the evidence was that Burke stole two newspapers at different times. Burke cannot, therefore, be held and an order was issued for his discharge.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

Owen Geoghegan Surrenders Himself.

Before Commissioner Shields.

Owen Geoghegan, indicted with Jim Irving for an assault on United States Deputy Marshal Dowley, surrendered himself to the authorities yesterday, and gave bail in $5,000 before Commissioner Shields to appear for trial. It will be remembered that the assault on the officer was committed in October last at Geoghegan's store, on the occasion of his attempt to arrest the defendant for an alleged personation of a voter. Irving is charged as the principal in the assault, and was tried for the offence some time ago, but, the jury not agreeing, a fresh trial will be had in a few days.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

An Old Divorce Suit, with New Particulars of Interest.

Before Judge Cardozo.

Mary A. Thomas vs. George W. Thomas.—This is an old divorce suit, the particulars of which have been frequently published. At the outset of the proceedings, five years ago, plaintiff procured an order for alimony at $5 a week; an allowance two years later made double the amount. She now claims that on such order there is due and unpaid alimony $1,255, and motion was made to have the defendant on account of such non-payment committed to Ludlow Street Jail without bail. She says that he fled the State to avoid payment and that he has now returned to this city and is at present engaged in an enterprise called "Great Fire Relief Concert, in Aid of the Sufferers of the Northwest." She characterizes this as in her belief a swindle, but says he is realizing a large profit therefrom. She says further that he is now supporting a woman and two children in elegant style, and that he has repeatedly said he will not pay alimony, and she does not believe he will unless locked up. In reply he says that he has not paid the alimony through inability; that she has an incorrigible temper and has threatened to kill him; that she pursued him vindictively into Pennsylvania, and procured his arrest there for alleged adultery, where he was honorably discharged; that she pursued him thence to Illinois, where he was ruined by the great fire, and that he is now simply making enough for his support. The Court reserved its decision.

Claiming To Be a City Father and Entitled to Salary as Such.

James E. McVeany vs. The Mayor, &c.—The plaintiff brings suit against the city for salary as Assistant Aldermen in 1869. The Board of County Canvassers, it will be remembered, declared Mr. Calkins elected, and the latter took his seat and drew his salary. In a trial before Judge Mullen the decision of the canvassers was reversed. On behalf of the city an answer was put in, stating the decision of the canvassers in favor of Calkins and that he had been paid the salary. A reply was made by the plaintiff, setting up the decision before Judge Mullen. The case came up on a motion to strike out the reply as immaterial, the city, as claimed, being no party to the suit. A preliminary point was taken by the plaintiff's counsel that the defence had interposed a demurrer to the reply; but Mr. Dean, Assistant Counsel to the Corporation, stated that it had been interposed since the motion was noticed, and under the necessity either to impose it or lose the advantage of the demurrer. The Court overruled the point, but on the main motion reserved its decision.

Writ of Error in the Case of Philip Wilkie.

In re. Philip Wilkie application was made by Mr. A. H. Hummel for a writ of error and stay of proceedings in the case of Wilkie, convicted the other day in the General Sessions of murder in the second degree and sentenced to State Prison for life. The Judge, after listening to the argument, granted the writ of error, but denied the stay of proceedings.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART 2.

Verdict Against the Adams Express Company.

Before Judge Mccunn.

Elias Magnin vs. W. B. Dinsmore.—This was a suit against the defendant, as President of Adams Express Company, for the value of a box of watches shipped in 1863 from this city to Memphis, Tenn. The defence is that the box was delivered and a receipt was produced, but this proved to be for diamonds. The box containing the watches, it was shown, was subsequently discovered in the lower harbor of this city in close proximity to a human head, the mystery of which created, as will be remembered, considerable excitement at the time and has never yet been cleared up. The trial lasted through several days, and ended yesterday by a verdict of $2,431 19 for the plaintiff.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

The Burke-Gardner Suit.

Before Judge Van Brunt.

The hearing of the Burke-Gardner case, in which Mrs. Burke, the plaintiff, sues for the value of certain bonds alleged to have been misappropriated, was set down for yesterday morning. In anticipation of some interesting developments the Court of Common Pleas was well filled, and the probabilities of the coming legal contest were discussed. Mrs. Burke, as well as several other ladies, occupied seats in the court room.

Mr. Dawson, for the plaintiff, moved that the case be set down first on the calendar, in accordance with Judge Loew's order.

Judge Van Brunt said that by a recent statute all cases against the Corporation had precedence, and as there was one at the beginning of the calendar he could not accede to the motion.

Mr. Dawson spoke at some length for his client, dilating on the inconvenience to which she had been put and the great expense attending delay. He contended that under all circumstances the case should be at once proceeded with.

Judge Van Brunt said he could not help it. The case must await its turn on the calendar.

Mr. Dawson thereupon intimated, in the course of a warm address, that he came from a country where the ladies were ever treated in a chivalrous manner and with consideration.

Judge Van Brunt—The ladies are seeking to take all the rights of men, and when they come here [illegible] they must take some of the men's hard [illegible].

After some further discussion the case was finally set down for this morning, at eleven o'clock.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Recorder Hackett.

An Officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Charged with Beating a Citizen—Disagreement of the Jury.

Nearly the entire session of this Court yesterday was occupied in the trial of an indictment for assault and battery against Archibald H. Campbell, upon the complaint of Patrick Baxter, who testified that on the 5th of October last, while passing through Fifth avenue at the corner of Thirty-[illegible] [illegible] he was brutally assaulted by the accused and George W. Doty and Sherman P. Sage. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the case with which he was the [illegible] Mr. Bergh at the time of the offence was the superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the other defendants, against whom a separate indictment was found, were officers acting under the Superintendent's directions.

The complainant testified as to the circumstances of the assault, stating that all the provocation which he gave to Campbell was a remark made to the driver of a carriage in Fifth avenue, whom the defendant had ordered to detach from very lame horses—that it was not right to require him to leave the carriage in the street at night. Campbell turned upon him, drew a club and beat him in a cruel manner, he quietly retreating to the other side of the avenue. William Carlisle, an engineer, who followed the parties to the station house, corroborated the statement of the prosecuting witness, and Dr. Harwood, upon whom Baxter called next day, testified to his being badly bruised.

A host of witnesses, including the defendants, Doty, Sage and Campbell, testified to a state of facts diametrically opposite to the witnesses for the people. They swore that Baxter called Bergh's officers opprobrious names, and when shoved away by Campbell he went across the street and threw either small stones or pieces of brickbats at them. The accused denied having beaten the complainant, and after several gentlemen who had known the defendant for twenty years had testified to his good character, the counsel addressed the jury. The testimony was so contradictory that they failed to agree, and the Recorder discharged them from the further consideration of the case. Eight were for acquittal and four for conviction.

Burglaries.

Theodore Woodruff pleaded guilty to a charge of burglariously entering the liquor store of John W. Earl, No. 396 West street, on the 12th of February, and stole bonds valued at $2,700, and was sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

James Smith and Martin Meehan, indicted for breaking into the tailor's shop of Henry Hinkel, No. 171 Third avenue, pleaded guilty to an attempt at burglary in the third degree.

John Casey and Michael Collins gave a similar plea, the charge being that on the 18th of February they entered the house of Caroline Witzler, No. 432 East Sixteenth street, and stole $1.0 worth of property.

Edward Plunkitt pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with stealing $75, on the 6th inst., from Job Y. Bird.

These prisoners were remanded till Wednesday.

John H. Bond, charged with stealing $.0 and some small articles, on the 28th of December, from Henry Gordon, pleaded guilty to petty larceny, and was sent to the Penitentiary for six months.

Mary A. Gillespie was tried upon a charge of stealing $100 worth of ladies' wearing apparel from Mrs. J. Tunison, 157 East Twenty-first street, in January, by whom she was employed as a domestic. The evidence against her was slight, and two respectable gentlemen gave her a good character, which resulted in a prompt acquittal.

BROOKLYN COURTS.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

The Liquor Dealers' Special Tax.

Before Commissioner Winslow.

Frederick Kohlman, of Flushing and Marcy avenues, and John Kelly, of Flushing avenue, were yesterday held to bail on the charge of retailing liquor without paying the special tax required by law. Kohlman's case was set down for the 29th and Kelly's for April 1.

Julius Althaus, of 576 Broadway, was also held on a similar charge.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

A Contested Election Case.

Before Judge Gilbert and a Jury.

The case of the People ex rel. John P. Douglass vs. Andrew J. Foster was called for trial yesterday. The parties were opposing candidates for Alderman of the Eleventh ward at the last election. The certificate of election was issued to Mr. Foster, who still holds his seat. This action is brought to determine whether Foster or his opponent (a republican) was the candidate elected. It is claimed by the defence that Mr. Foster was elected by a majority of one vote, while the plaintiff claims that he himself is entitled to the seat, and that votes which should have been credited to him were given by the canvassers to the defendant. He alleges that great frauds were committed in the Third district of the ward in question.

A jury was obtained with little difficulty yesterday and the trial proceeded. There is a very large number of witnesses to be examined and the trial will not probably be concluded before to-night. The principal testimony yesterday was that given by parties who swore that they voted for Mr. Douglass. District Attorney Britton appears for the people and Mr. Crooke for Mr. Foster. The case is exciting very little interest.

COURT OF SESSIONS.

Stolen Goods.

Before Judge Moore and Associate Justices Voorhees and Johnson.

Charles Hannon and Alonzo Murray were sentenced to the Penitentiary for four years and a month for stealing solder from Charles Williams' establishment, on Broadway, which they feloniously entered. They said that one Jacob Gert purchased the solder from them at five cents a pound(!) and yesterday Gerty was tried on the charge of receiving stolen property. The jury disagreed.

"Bummer Jack" in Court.

John Dumbleton, alias "Bummer Jack," while confined in the Raymond street jail, stabbed the fireman of that institution. The prisoner pleaded to an assault, with intent to do bodily harm, and was remanded until Saturday for sentence.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Supposed Murder of a Drunken Man—The Suspicious Circumstances—Two Men Detained to Await Investigation.

On St. Patrick's Day a laborer named Michael Gray, a boarder at 557 First avenue, left his home at an early hour to view the procession. About six o'clock in the evening of the same day he called to see his brother, who is a bartender at the corner of Thirty-second street and First avenue, and left there again about seven o'clock, accompanied by an acquaintance named William Monaghan, residing at No. 549 First avenue. Monaghan was not so very drunk that he did not know what he was doing but Gray was nearly stupid with excessive drinking. The two, on arriving at the corner of Thirtieth street and First avenue, entered Henry Lammerman's liquor store, and had two drinks each. Patrick Green, of 347 East Thirty-fifth street, who was in the store at the time, saw Gray drop a bundle of bank notes, which he had pulled out of his pocket, and picking them up, he returned them to Gray. He was invited to drink, which he did. A difficulty then arose between the bartender, Fred Wauck, and the party about the price of the drinks. Wauck said Gray had ordered them and he should pay for them. Monaghan said, "Oh, he has plenty money; he can pay for them easily." Gray then took from his vest pocket a fifty cent stamp and paid for the drinks, receiving in change thirty cents. The three soon after left the saloon. Green, evidently the only sober one, was heard to remark as he went into the street that he would convey Gray to his home. As the party was crossing the avenue Gray fell upon his face and was cut pretty badly. This accident some of those in the store witnessed, but thought no further of it as they saw Gray get up, assisted by the others, and walk on towards the other side of the avenue. Here commences the mysterious part of this strange case, an explanation of which will probably be given only when the East River gives up its dead. Those in the saloon state that about fifteen or twenty-five minutes after the party left, Green came back. His hands, face and shirt bosom were bespattered with blood, in explanation of which he said that when Gray fell down he stooped and lifted him to his feet, and in doing so Gray's head, which had been severely cut, came in contact with his breast at the same time the blood got on his hands. The explanation seemed to be satisfactory, for the suspicions concerning the fate of Gray—who has not been seen since that night—have only been aroused within the last week in consequence of the continued and unaccountable absence of the missing man. The missing man was a laborer and single, and was generally temperate. Monaghan and Green were also laborers and single men, but Monaghan only had a slight acquaintance with Gray. Search has been made in every direction for the missing man, but without success. Green and Monaghan were yesterday taken before Justice Coulter, who held the prisoners for a day or two, to afford the police time for investigation.

EX-GOVERNOR BULLOCK'S CONDUCT.

Arrival of a Georgia Legislative Committee.

This winter seems to be prolific of legislative committees, that are not confined to our own Legislature, but to other States. Last week we had a committee of the Pennsylvania Legislature probing the supposed frauds of some of their State officers, and ere they were well on their way back to Harrisburg New York is honored by a similar one. This comes [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to inquire into and report upon all the acts they can discover [illegible] [illegible] throw light upon that [illegible] ex-Governor Bullock of that State. The committee consisting of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] where they will be probably [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] has already examined [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] gentlemen [illegible] will be examined [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] cannot be made public [illegible] [illegible] but the investigation will include [illegible] financial transactions with the [illegible] Henry Clews, although a special [illegible] composed of Messrs. Simons, Hall [illegible] of Georgia, will sit here next week specially to inquire into the financial acts of Bullock and the State agents Clews and Kimball.

THE REVOLUTION IN MEXICO is on the eve of collapse, to judge by our special despatches, which speak of nothing but disastrous defeats lately sustained by the revolutionists. Indeed, so complete was the victory of General Rocha, and so crushing the collapse of the revolutionists near Zacatecas, that the fate of the whole struggle appears to have been decided in that one battle, which is generally looked upon as the death blow to the revolution. But there is little hope that the failure of the rebellion will put an end to the present reign of anarchy and red-handed robbery in the unfortunate republic; for Mexico cannot be ruled by Mexicans.

THE FRENCH PROJECT OF TAXING RAW MATERIALS for use in manufacture has been abandoned for the present by the government, and will not appear in the Thiers budget. Queen Victoria has just passed through Paris on her trip to Berlin.

IT SHOULD BE BORNE IN MIND that the Liberal Republican Convention is to be held in Cincinnati on the first Wednesday in May, which occurs on the first day of the month. The affair should not be made a muddle of in consequence of a misapprehension of dates—only.

ERIE ADVANCED EIGHT PER CENT yesterday—viz., from 52 to 60—holding the rise to the end of the day. The dealings were on a very large scale, verifying the prediction that Erie, with an honest board of directors, and the dice not loaded, would be the great feature of the stock market. The speculation is even wilder in London, if we may judge from the cable quotations.

JERSEYMEN have more reason than ever to be proud of their little State. The crushing blow given to municipal corruption in the Court of Oyer and Terminer at Jersey City yesterday will be hailed with satisfaction, even in this city. The first of the trials for municipal frauds has resulted in a verdict of guilty against every member of the Board of Police Commissioners and the Chief of Police. Will the Legislature at Trenton take the lesson? Senator McPherson's bill to repeal the Jersey City charter comes up to-day, and it should receive a unanimous vote

THE FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT rose up like a dark spectre before the astonished Assembly last night in the person of the Rev. Mr. Rhodes, who prayed for the unfortunate bone hunters with zeal and fervor. He is the first colored gentleman in the history of the State, who was permitted to rush in the face of Providence in this way. We like the innovation. White chaplains are unfortunately too much given to addressing the Throne of Grace in reference to bills in committee, and demanding special interference in close political contests. The New York Legislature cackled a long time about the fifteenth amendment, and behold! here is a colored clerical chicken come home to roost and crow.

The Alabama Question—English Ignorance of America—Mr. Gladstone's Expedients.

There is a lesson underlying this whole Alabama discussion that should not be forgotten by those who look for a genuine understanding between the United States and Great Britain. The English newspapers seem to have awakened from a kind of editorial stupor and to find that their clamors have been premature and vain. On one side we have seen a press that is regarded as a model of decorum and dignity, free from passion and impulse, wrought into a state of high anger over the aggression, the chicanery, the perfidy of America. The humorous journals have had cartoons peculiarly offensive to the United States, Uncle Sam being compared to the Bucaneer Baronet Tichborne now in Newgate, while Punch has singled out the HERALD for especial censure and ridicule. Mr. Gladstone has dissolved himself into a correspondence with some anxious Bohemian, while Mr. Disraeli has no keener subject for his taunts than the embarrassments of the Ministry. Even the Daily News, the one journal which has been especially kind to America, has had a series of paroxysms of the most dangerous character. On the other hand, the American press, which has generally been regarded as sensational, and American statesmen, who are supposed to be somewhat empirical in their ideas of law and comity, have shown a calmness and a dignity in the discussion that have surprised their English critics.

The English view of the question has been ably supported on both sides of the Atlantic, it being an extraordinary fact that many of our leading journals in New York are under the control of subjects of the English Crown. While in England the tendency of the press has been to affect continental public opinion, and ultimately the Commissioners representing foreign Powers in America, the English press has made war upon the administration as having been guilty of a trick or a makeshift, or an effort to control public opinion in favor of General Grant. There is a singular tradition in England that when a President seeks to win popular support he foments an angry feeling towards England, and the average British mind is under the impression that the whole difficulty is an ingenious experiment on the part of President Grant to secure his re-election; that England is to be harried and vexed and teased to induce the Irish to support his canvass, and that when the election is sure there will be no more questions raised. On the contrary, we see the reverse as plainly as can be seen. This whole excitement was simply the necessities of the Gladstone Ministry, taking advantage of the ignorance of England—perhaps we shou'd say the incredulity and jealousy of England. We remember in Mr. Dickens' Pickwick sketches the author makes one of his characters advise another that if he desired to earn some money he should visit this country and write a book abusing the Americans to pay the expenses. That Mr. Dickens was serious in his humorous suggestion was shown in his following the example himself shortly after. The English mind has always been prepared to believe anything of America that was discreditable, and the English newspapers in this country have pandered to this infirmity by belittling American institutions and holding up England as an example that we cannot too thoroughly imitate. The evidence will show that the English Minister followed the same line of reasoning, and that he took advantage of a constitutional infirmity of the English character to secure his administration from the danger of an excitement on domestic questions.

When we speak of a constitutional infirmity of the English character we do not mean it in an offensive sense. The English mind cannot forget that the Americans were rebels; that our grandfathers held the same attitude to the Crown that the Fenians hold to-day. Our nationality is, therefore, tainted, and by the measure of his loyalty to the Crown and his adoration of sacred majesty the Englishman looks with suspicion and aversion upon a nation that sprang from treason, and the heads of whose founders should have bleached on Temple Bar. He has seen this treasonable confederation, with its rebel flag, rise in less than a hundred years to have more population than Great Britain itself, and with a territory capable of supporting as many people as China. He thinks with mortification and regret of the failure of the statesmen of George the Third to retain these splendid dependencies, and feels that but for successful rebellion England might to-day be mistress of the American Continent and her fleets controlling the Pacific and Atlantic. But for that rebellion the empire of Great Britain, stupendous as it is, would have reached a splendor dimming that of Rome, and making it truly the ruler of the world. The Parliament Houses of Westminster would have representatives from India and Australia, Canada and the United States. This union of colonies, which to-day would have been the greatest appendage of the English Crown—the true centre of its wealth and power—the "Greater Britain," as Sir Charles Dilke puts it—has not only been rifted from the empire but presumes to contest with it the supremacy of the seas. We can fancy what the English think of America when we try to feel what our own feelings towards the South would have been, had it secured its independence and advanced to empire. So, when the rebellion came, the English welcomed it with the joy the North would feel, if we learned that Texas or Louisiana had taken up arms against the Southern Confederacy. Of course England wished that rebellion to succeed, and of course the mighty power of England would be used to encourage our downfall. In addition to this the average English mind is in an astonishing state of ignorance concerning the United States. Of course the English are intelligent, well read and progressive, and there are many of them who are thoroughly well informed concerning this country and its institutions. But, as a general thing, the people know as little about our people, our laws and customs, our geography and our resources, as we ourselves know of Cuba or New Zealand. It is impossible to read an English book treating on America, or a leading article on American affairs in a London newspaper, or even the notes of as keen an observer as Dickens, without seeing mistakes for which an American schoolboy would be whipped. It is mainly because the English press ignores America. We read the London newspapers and see among the cable telegrams from this country little more than a despatch announcing the arrival of foreign steamers, the price of gold and of Erie. When an event as important as the overthrow of Erie or the Orange riots takes place there are three or four vague lines. Beyond this America is a dead country to England. The newspapers tell nothing of American life—nothing but the extravagances of our laws and legislation. On the other hand, the HERALD prints despatches from England as full as from Washington. The American reader is every morning informed as to events in England, the debates in the House of Commons, the movements of the Queen, the tone of the London press on grave questions—every circumstance that affects the well-being of the English people. As a consequence, therefore, America is fully informed of every phase of English feeling, and when a question like the present becomes prominent in the diplomacy of the two countries our people are well informed and can decide for themselves, and cannot be cajoled into a panic by any administration.

To the absence of this knowledge of America, added to the constitutional infirmity of the British mind, so far as this country is concerned, we attribute this panic. The English were disposed to believe the newspapers and the Ministry when they were told that our case was a surprise; that it contained pretensions utterly unfounded; that we had in some way deceived the English diplomatists; that Lord Ripon and his colleagues had signed one treaty, which upon examination proved to be another; that we had dealt with the great nation as Warren Hastings and Lord Clive were in the habit of dealing with the effeminate princes of India. When the journals talked of indemnity for Fenian invasions of Canada it was believed that Canada had been invaded and we were to blame in some degree. So from worse to worse, misrepresentation following misrepresentation, until England was roused as one man—angry, defiant and ready for war. The Channel and Mediterranean fleets were set in motion, business was paralyzed, and more money really lost by that reason than would pay the whole Alabama claim. The spectacle of any nation arising in anger and speaking as one man in defence of the country and the flag is the most sublime that can be seen on this earth, and there was something terrible and thrilling in this people of England in the attitude of angry emotion, their Prime Minister in trembling and passionate rhetoric speaking of this treaty and the Geneva case as though it were a suddenly discovered "Gunpowder Plot," and declaring that England, in the depths of national misfortune, would never submit to it. The Ministry was saved. Mr. Gladstone succeeded in introducing a disturbing element into the English mind; America was insulted, outraged, cruelly wronged. That was nothing. The Ministry was saved, and American honor would be soothed by the honeyed phrases of Lord Granville's rhetoric.

If the necessities of the Gladstone Ministry had permitted the Premier to have dealt frankly with England he might have been driven out of power, but there would be a better feeling between the two countries. America would not feel, as she must feel, that her honor was wounded, that her good name was called in question to satisfy the exigency of a debate in the Commons. Mr. Gladstone should certainly be above the constitutional infirmity of the English mind. He knew the truth. Why was it not spoken? What is the truth? That the American case was in the hands of the English government in December; that the claim for consequential damages was expressly mentioned in the treaty discussions in a carefully prepared paper read by Mr. Fish to the Commission; that the fact of its presentation was telegraphed to Mr. Gladstone; that no protest was made against its submission to Geneva; that the whole Commission expected it would be so submitted and decided, according to law, and buried forever, and that, so far from desiring a great sum of money from England, America cared nothing at all about money, and that the highest figure estimated in any discussion or anticipation of the results was about twenty millions of dollars. Mr. Gladstone might have said further that Mr. Fish did right to press these claims, as they were in existence and should be decided. He might have shown that not to press them now would be to make an imperfect treaty—to leave something undetermined—and permit the existence of a grievance which some unscrupulous statesman in the future, under an administration hostile to England, might call into life as a source of anger between the two countries. With his wealth and subtlety of rhetoric he might have shown how Mr. Fish deserved great honor for his comprehension of the situation and his desire to make a lasting peace. If he was in any way annoyed by the criticisms of Mr. Disraeli he might illustrate his position by certain auxiliary facts. Referring to the Fenian invasion of Canada, about which the English desire us to allow damages, he might show that the Fenians never really invaded Canada; that they were captured by American troops under the command of General Meade, who went to the border for that purpose, and that the General of the invasion was tried, convicted and imprisoned for two years for the attempt. He might well say that if the Duke of Cambridge, as commander of the British army, had only been hurried to Liverpool and Mr. Laird been put in jail for two years for an offence against the United States far graver than the foolish O'Neill's demonstration on our border at the head of a squad of enthusiastic Irishmen, English honor would be more respected. He might have added that the Americans had shown no passion when the English advanced to the Board of Assessors now in session at Washington the Confederate loan as a claim in offset to ours, and he might have dwelt upon the passion which would have excited the English mind if, in imitation of this example, we had presented the Fenian bonds to the same Board for redemption by England. It is possible, we say, that if Mr Gladstone had taken this frank, direct, honorable course, and told the whole truth as it exists on the record, and will be so seen whenever it leaps to light, his Ministry would have been embarrassed and perhaps overthrown, but he would have done justice to America—Roman justice, it is true, that would have done him more honor than twenty Premierships.

As it is the attitude of America may well compare with that of England. We have nothing to regret, nothing to explain. While England, blindly and falsely led, and ignorant of the truth, has been in a storm of rage, America has been calm, confident, patient, our Congress declining even to discuss the question or ask for information concerning it. The contrast will do us great honor. The lesson it teaches is that England should take pains to know a little more about America, and there would be no chance for a sorely distressed Minister to save his place at the peril of a misunderstanding between the two nations.

General Grant's Views and Position on the Mexican Question.

In the famous Lincoln campaign of 1860, which marked the beginning of a new period in the history of the government and the party politics of the United States, the Hon. William H. Seward, on the stump, taking a sweeping view all round the horizon through the telescope of "manifest destiny," foreshadowed, on the one hand, the extension of the "Stars and Stripes" to the North Pole, and on the other to the Isthmus of Darien, including the Gulf of Mexico and its fruitful tropical islands. His purpose, while adroitly concealing it, was to divert the public mind from the gathering clouds and shadows and mutterings of the Southern rebellion to the illimitable expansion, power and prosperity which awaited us with the preservation of the Union. Yet this idea with Mr. Seward was something more than special pleading, as some years later we saw in his treaty for the annexation of the little volcanic island of St. Thomas, and in his treaty for the purchase of the stupendous Arctic empire of Alaska—that wonderful Territory where, as he tells us from his own observation, "the American eagle soars aloft in all his glory, and where even the humming bird does not disdain to flutter."

Certain volcanic upheavals in the Caribbean, with their destructive tidal waves, overthrew the St. Thomas annexation movement, or otherwise General Grant might have been successful in his St. Domingo scheme. We only want a beginning in the West Indies, in order to go steadily on with the absorption of all those fine islands, great and small, and St. Thomas, if secured, would have been a beginning. Failing in St. Thomas, St. Domingo would have served the purpose much better; but failing also in St. Domingo, we are reduced for a starting point to Cuba or Mexico, and either will do. But as Spain appears to be as heroically attached to Cuba as Mrs. Micawber was to her worthless spouse; as Spain will neither sell the island to us nor give it the generous boon of independence; as Spain, in short, declares that she will fight for Cuba to her last man and her last dollar, we have just now no choice but Mexico in the opening of our Southern programme of annexation.

And here we find that General Grant is sound as a cocoanut. His views on the Mexican question are the views of the HERALD, which are simply the views of common sense in their application to "manifest destiny." General Grant, as a trusty Washington correspondent informs us, holds these opinions:—That the resources and capabilities of Mexico invite and demand a good government; that no greater blessing could be given that people than a United States protectorate; that such a protectorate would be a great triumph to his administration and a grand step accomplished in "manifest destiny;" that Mexico should not be left to the hazards of European intervention and of another foreign Prince, introduced like Maximilian; that as long as that country is powerless to command respect for its flag abroad or obedience to its laws at home it will be at the mercy of any adventurous Power, and that it would be much cheaper and easier to prevent the landing of a foreign force in Mexico than to drive it out when once fairly established in the country, like the late French occupation under Marshal Bazaine.

These are the views of General Grant, in regard to the advantages to Mexico, and to us as her next-door neighbor, which are offered in a United States protectorate. They are sound and satisfactory. But on turning to the other side of the medal he presents us a different picture. General Grant's experience in his St. Domingo venture, in the first place, warns him against taking the initiative in this proposed settlement of the Mexican question. He does not care to invite again the misrepresentations and adverse criticisms that were inspired by his efforts to secure, for almost nothing, the splendid tropical island of St. Domingo. Accordingly he has made up his mind that if, under his administration, there is to be a practical movement for a protectorate over Mexico, or for annexation, it must come from Congress. But as it is apparent that the Mexican government will not consent to the sacrifice of its independence, he holds that a protectorate on our part means the marching into Mexico of fifty thousand men and the conquest and occupation of the country as in 1846-7, and Congress is the war-making power. And so in regard to Mexico we must, it appears, await the drift of events. The President appreciates the force of that predominant public opinion represented by the HERALD, and would most heartily give it effect and purpose; but he is in the hands of Congress, the law-making power.

At any rate the position of General Grant upon this important and momentous question is clearly defined, and is all that can be required of him, especially after the wet blanket thrown over him in his St. Domingo undertaking. An old bird is not caught the second time in the same net. Now, therefore, we should like to have another test, and a more deliberate one than the last, of the sense of the House of Representatives on the proposition of a Mexican protectorate. We all know that General Scott, as the representative of the United States, while he was occupying the "Halls of the Montezumas," was offered by a Mexican committee of notables a Mexican dictatorship, but that he refused it because the negro equality of Mexico could not be harmonized with the negro slavery of the United States; and we all know that this supreme difficulty to the incorporation of Mexico of that day no longer exists, and we are not sure that the Mexican government of Juarez is inflexibly opposed to any peaceable scheme tending to annexation. No hero of the hour in Mexico, no distinguished American in his own country, no idol of the populace in any country of modern times was ever received by a grateful people with a more cordial and generous welcome than that given to Mr. Seward by the Mexicans, in his delightful triumphal tour through their country some three years ago. They recognized him as their liberator from the yoke of France and the restorer of their independence, and all that they possessed was offered him, for nothing that they had was too good for him. Can it be imagined, then, that that people who voluntarily proposed a dictatorship to General Scott, as the agent of the United States; that these Mexicans, who in their enthusiastic welcome of Mr. Seward sought an expression of their gratitude to our government for relieving them of their French masters, are wholly unprepared for annexation? We think not. On the contrary, we cannot resist these impressions, that if properly approached Juarez himself may be made a champion of "manifest destiny," and that if judiciously managed all the fighting Mexican factions, as well as the non-combatant property holders and property losers there, can be peaceably reconciled to, at least, a United States protectorate for a short time as an experiment in behalf of domestic peace and industry, and security against European extortions and aggressions. We think we have a member of Congress or two from New York wise enough and strong enough to test the sense of the House on the subject in some practical resolution; for we expect that Mexico will be made a question in the coming fall elections for the next Congress.

The Lowery Outlaws—The Lesson of Their Existence—A Great Herald Enterprise.

In the face of a civilization outraged and trampled on we present to-day the story of our correspondent's sojourn among the outlaws of North Carolina. That he has escaped from their clutches is due to no other influences than the generosity of the outlaws themselves and their reliance on the HERALD to state their case to the world as they tell it. Here is an anomaly that we tell the people and government of the United States not to underrate. It presents in all its details, from the swamp whence the outlaws mock their hunters to the sanctum whence the swaggering Robeson editors send forth their safe and cowardly defiance to those who would better their condition, a state of things which cries for a sharp and sudden remedy. When the outlaws of Sherwood forest held carnival England was an Anglo-Saxon slave in a Norman master's grasp; when Rob Roy lorded it among the cattle thieves of the Scottish highlands there was a wreck of the Stuart pretender's fortunes strewn over the land, and his stand was a fierce scorn of submission to those he deemed tyrants and invaders. With the Robeson outlaws these ideal thieves of history have nothing in common save their outlawry. From the time when their dead chief took to the swamps rather than serve as a digger of the rebel fortifications at Wilmington down to the present day we have the story of murders in hate and murders in revenge on one side or the other as thickly as the darkest stories of the half savage Corsican vendetta. When we turn from the outlaws themselves to the people, white and black, of the States surrounding, the view is almost as discouraging. A sullenness that only changes from its glowering to snap and bark at any ray of light that comes in upon them—to curse it as canines bay the moon—is the sole evidence of their vitality. The clouds of prejudice that so obscure the Southern mind have made their eyes unfit to see things as they are. They cannot see the shame and disgrace that is in their midst without enveloping it in party colors. If it is bad, says the Edgefield Advertiser, it is Grant. If it is shameful, retorts the Raleigh Era, it is the Ku Klux Legislature. Gentlemen, it is neither. It is the want of manly energy, public spirit and the lapse of social tone among you all that permits it. We make this avowal not to increase bitterness, but to bid you fling away the used-up shibboleths of party vindictiveness and go to work like men. Clearing the outlaws from the swamps would be a small thing if the South would clear the cobwebs from its brains.

The escape of our correspondent from the desperate band, with the history of his experiences among them, is another victory in enterprise for the HERALD to inscribe on its banner, which it is our pride to carry forward wherever on the wide world there is something to be gained for civilization, for humanity. The recital of facts will be found to beggar the stories of romance, and few of the scenes in Poe's "Tales of Mystery" will create a more tentative horror in the mind of the reader than that of the correspondent led blindfold by the armed murderers through their fastnesses of wood and swamp, with brutal threats hissed in his ears, half fearful jest, half demoniac earnest. But he has come safe out of their hands, and we rejoice at it. May the omen of his safe return be a bright one for our other heroic correspondent out, as this one has been, beyond the bounds of civilization in the service of the HERALD. The gentleman who, if living, is searching in the wilds of Africa for the great explorer, Dr. Livingstone, we hope soon to hear. Like the correspondent among the Lowerys, has achieved the object of his mission and returned to reap the reward. Successful or unsuccessful, we glory in their feats, and in any case keep our reserves ready for fresh trials and triumphs in the broad field of journalistic labor

THE PROPHET NOT SENT TO PRISON.—The Mormon Prophet is still comfortably lodged at home, with only a United States Marshal giving him a gentle supervision. The report in the telegram on Saturday that he had been sent to Camp Douglas, on account of the dance and a good high time generally in the City Hall Prison, was the offspring of the misplacement of a comma in the despatch. Brigham Young Hampton is one of the police who are indicted for the assassination of Dr. Robinson, and he is the personage, and not the Prophet, who was sent to the military calaboose.

HAVING SEEN how smoothly the whole machine was working in Connecticut, Senator Wilson has winged his way to Washington.

The Legislative Scramble Over Rapid Transit for New York—The Advantages of Viaduct Roads To Be Constructed By the City.

The unseemly scramble in the State Legislature over the New York Rapid Transit bills has not yet been brought to a close. The Senate has passed two of the lobby schemes—the Pneumatic Underground and the Two-tier concern—while the Assembly has reported adversely to the former and in favor of the rival job known as the Central Underground. This muddle may appear a mystery to those who are not familiar with the history of modern legislation, but is susceptible of easy explanation. The Pneumatic Ring has been made to include the Senators who supported the measure, a majority of whom are represented in the job through "names in the bill;" that is to say, each friendly Senator names a "dummy" representing himself, who is introduced into the bill as an original corporator. The Central Underground Ring has in a similar manner secured the Assembly Railroad Committee and probably a majority of the members of the lower house. The two fraudulent jobs may thus happily defeat each other, unless, as has already been suggested, they can be united in one comprehensive swindle large enough to afford room for all the speculators, Senators, Assemblymen, lobbyists and Bohemians on both sides. In this event the citizens of New York will have to depend upon Governor Hoffman for protection, and the Governor is too familiar with the interests of the metropolis to render his action doubtful. In the meantime we shall take care that our correspondents at Albany track to their holes and ferret out every incorporator in these impudent jobs, and expose their relations with the legislators who vote in favor of the bills, in order that the people of New York may know the sort of men upon whom the franchises of the city are bestowed.

The Legislature, we are told, is "not in favor of a viaduct road or roads to be constructed by the city." Of course not. In such a work there would be no legislative incorporators and no stock to be parcelled out among Bohemians and lobbyists. The reform Legislature, having been deprived of the Erie Ring placer and the Tammany mine, can discover no jobs more profitable than the New York city railroad franchises, and are unwilling to release them from their clutches. But if any desire prevailed at Albany to secure rapid transit in New York for the public interests a law would be passed at once authorizing the city to build two viaduct roads along the river lines. Close calculations made by men of practical ability and experience prove that such roads would be remunerative even if it became necessary to purchase every foot of the right of way. The estimated cost of the line from the City Hall to the Harlem River, near Third avenue, a distance of seven and a half miles, including the purchase of the land through the blocks for a roadway of fifty feet wide, with sufficient additional land for depots, sidings, engine houses, car sheds and other necessary buildings; the most thorough construction of the viaduct, with four lines of track; the full equipment of the road to a capacity for the transportation of one hundred and twenty thousand persons daily, and the interest on the outlay during the construction, is under thirty million dollars. This estimate, which has been liberally made, does not include the contemplated two-track road from the City Hall to the Battery, which would cost about two million dollars more. The probable income from this east side road alone, immediately after its completion, has been calculated by persons quite familiar with the car travel of that portion of the city to be equal to four million seven hundred and twenty thousand dollars a year. This is based upon one hundred and twenty thousand fares per day for three hundred and sixty days, which produces four million three hundred and twenty thousand dollars, and four hundred thousand dollars more for the rental of property required for the construction of the road but not needed for its operation. The latter calculation we regard as much too low. The road would cross about one hundred and fifty streets, and, besides its street property, would have ample space to rent along the line for storage, cellarage, stabling, &c., all of which is utilized by the London viaduct road. Nor is any allowance made in the above estimate for the large income certain to be realized from freight and express matter. Raising the rental of unemployed property to six hundred thousand dollars, and allowing only one million dollars a year for freight and express, we have an annual income of just upon six million dollars, which we are confident is not too high an estimate.

The probable time required to complete such a road along the east side of the city, provided the whole amount of capital was in hand and no extraordinary delay was experienced in obtaining the land, is set down by experts at about two years. If the city did the work the entire capital would, of course, be secured at once. The plan of construction considered best is of fireproof material—brick, stone and iron—except for the bearers of the rails. There are no material engineering difficulties to be overcome in the construction of a viaduct railroad, and whatever difficulties may be in the way are above the ground and visible, and the cost of their removal can be calculated to a dollar. The east side road would, as we have said, cross about one hundred and fifty streets on the line first mentioned, and would pass through an equal number of blocks. Work could be prosecuted on each and all of these blocks at once, if desirable, without greater public inconvenience than would attend the construction of dwelling houses in similar situations, and without any danger or damage to adjacent buildings. No interference need take place with any sewers, gas or water pipes, and on the proposed plan of construction but little annoyance would be experienced by property owners on the line during the progress of the work, and the road when completed would afford far greater comfort to passengers than would any arcade, underground, pneumatic, three-tier, open cut or general combination bonbon ever invented as a means of money making by a hungry Albany lobby

The carefully estimated cost of operating and maintaining a viaduct road on the east side, as above described, is one million five hundred and seventy thousand dollars a year, or equal to about thirty-three per cent of the estimated receipts. This estimate was made some months since by cautious and experienced railroad men, and it has subsequently been verified by the actual results on the Metropolitan Railway of London during the last half of the year 1871, the operating expenses and maintenance of which are stated at thirty-five per cent of the gross receipts of the road, not including any income realized from the rental of property. Assuming the cost of the East River side viaduct to be thirty million dollars, and estimating the income at the lowest amount named, without any allowance for freight and express, we have the following result to prove that the road could be constructed by the city without a dollar's expense to the taxpayers, and would pay for itself in a few years:—

Annual income, as previously estimated...		$4,720,000
Interest on thirty million dollars city bonds at seven per cent	$2,100,000
Operating expenses	1,570,000
		3,670,000
Leaving for sinking fund per annum......		$1,050,000

The calculation is made upon seven per cent bonds, but at six per cent the securities would sell a little above par. The road would thus be paid for in less than twenty-five years. The estimated results are, however, predicated on a traffic equal to less than one-half the capacity of the proposed east side road, because at least twelve thousand persons per hour would be safely carried in each direction, for the entire length of the road, or twenty-four thousand fares per hour; and, as many would travel but part of the distance, the fares taken would be increased over the capacity for through travel.

We invite criticism of these estimates, which, we know, are liberally made and are none too favorable to the viaduct roads. The cost of a road on the west side of the city, along the line of the North River to Spuyten Duyvil Creek, would be mainly the same as on the east side, and the calculations for one would be found to apply to both projects. But the main expense is, of course, the purchase of the right of way, and, if deemed desirable to delay the construction of the roads until the completion of the new streets designed by the Dock Commission along the two rivers, they could be built on the line of those streets by the city without this heavy outlay. As the work would, however, pay for itself, without any burden on the taxpayers; as the two roads could be completed, say in three years, and as the progress of the city and the comfort, convenience, health and morals of the people demand that rapid transit shall be given to them as speedily as possible, there is no reason why the city should not be authorized to construct both viaduct railways at once, and to pay for them by the issue of city railroad bonds, at six or seven per cent interest. There is no reason, that is to say, apart from the corrupt and selfish intrigues of the Albany lobby and the greed of Senators and Assemblymen, who are striving to make a few dollars for themselves out of the city's franchises. No man of intelligence and honesty can advocate a Broadway underground scheme as preferable to such roads as we propose. It is impossible to calculate the cost of a tunnel. After sinking thirty million dollars in such a work engineering difficulties may be discovered requiring more than double that amount to remove. No sensible capitalist would risk his money in such a blind and dangerous project. A Broadway tunnel road could not be constructed at all without upheaving the main channel of the business of the city for years, and disarranging all the network of sewers, gas and water pipes, &c., to the serious suffering and injury of the people. The work would necessarily be slow even without calculating on those obstructions certain to be encountered. The most competent engineers in the city agree that the excavation of Broadway, particularly in some portions of the street where the soil is loose and sandy, would utterly destroy a number of buildings and would render hundreds of others insecure. In the crowded part of London the Metropolitan Underground road passes along the New road, an avenue for the most part probably three hundred feet from building to building, the houses mainly standing back from the sidewalk, with gardens before them; and yet, even in that locality, great damage was done to the buildings and heavy costs were incurred in consequence by the company. These facts would suffice to convince any body of intelligent and honest legislators of the folly of sanctioning a tunnel under Broadway, and of the propriety of passing a law authorizing the construction of the East River and North River Viaduct railways by the city of New York. But the reform legislators of 1872 seem more bent upon pocketing a few corrupt dollars than upon legislating for the public good, and hence they will probably pass the most remunerative jobs they can find in the shape of New York city railroads, unless, indeed, they should quarrel over the division of the spoils, in which event the people of the metropolis will be saved from plunder, although they may be deprived for another year of the rapid transit they so much desire.

Personal Intelligence.

ROCHA'S MARCH AGAINST DIAZ

Eight Hundred Rebels Killed and Wounded in the Battle Near Zacatecas.

The Revolution on the Eve of Collapse.

TELEGRAMS TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

The HERALD correspondent at the city of Mexico has forwarded us the following special despatch:—

CITY OF MEXICO, March 20, Via HAVANA, March 25, 1872.

The special despatch which appeared in the HERALD, giving news regarding the whereabouts of Porfirio Diaz and his assumption of the chief command over the revolutionists in Northern Mexico, has been communicated by telegraph from New York to Mazatlan, via San Francisco, and has put the government on the alert.

Rocha is probably even now marching on Mazatlan, whence he will attempt to capture Diaz and the arms said to have been accumulated there by the revolutionists in that region.

A REBEL DEFEAT.

General Zepeda defeated the rebel cavalry on the 18th instant near Chararac. The rising in Minatilan, headed by the revolutionary chief Veta has also been crushed. Veta himself was killed.

Over $32,000 have been subscribed by the French residents in the city of Mexico toward the payment of the German war indemnity.

Terrible Details of the Revolutionary Defeat Near Zacatecas—Treachery of an Infantry Corps—Demoralization of the Rebels.

The HERALD correspondent in Matamoros has forwarded us the following special despatch:—

MATAMOROS, Mexico, March 21. Via BROWNSVILLE, Texas, March 24, 1872.

Later advices state that the defeat of the rebels was even more complete and disastrous than hitherto known. The government infantry corps which was captured by the revolutionists in the battle of Matapulgas, and afterwards embodied in the revolutionary army, rejoined the Juarist forces under Rocha, inflicting terrible slaughter on the revolutionists. About eight hundred of the latter were killed and wounded.

TREVINO'S DESPERATE CONDITION.

General Trevino, who was in chief command of the rebels during the battle, arrived at Saltillo in an awful condition. All his forces were either scattered or disorganized. He has, however, commenced the formation of a nucleus and is gathering the stragglers.

TREVINO AND MARTINEZ QUARRELLING.

General Trevino quarrelled with his colleague, General Martinez, about a month ago, owing to the former having appointed a young lawyer as Governor of the State of San Luis Potosi. Since that time these two commanders have ceased all co-operation.

The revolutionists are generally demoralized, and it is expected that they will evacuate Camargo and the whole border very soon.

The Revolutionists Driven Out from Aguascalientas, Lagos and Zacatecas—Government Relief to San Luis Potosi—General Rocha's Victory the Death Blow to the Revolution—Anarchy and Robbery the Order of the Day.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 15, Via HAVANA, March 25, 1872.

The government forces are triumphant over the revolutionists. General Rocha has driven them out of the cities of Aguas Calientas, Lagos and Zacatecas, and relieved the troops at San Luis Potosi. In a battle on the 2d instant General Rocha, with 6,000 troops, defeated the united revolutionary forces numbering 9,000 men, killing and wounding 700 and capturing 7,000 men and all their artillery, except three guns.

The revolutionists retreated towards Fresnillo and Xerez, being pursued by General Rocha. General Rocha's victory is a death blow to revolutionary prospects, but anarchy will prevail for a long time.

There is nothing doing in domestic industries and trade in foreign goods is slight.

General Negrete, with 1,600 men, keeps the States of Puebla, Hidalgo and Tlascala in constant alarm by his acts of vandalism. He avoids open engagements and with his troops attacks defenceless towns, haciendas and railroad trains.

On the 3d he attacked a working party on the Apizaco Railroad, robbing the paymaster, employés and laborers. He returned on the 4th and kidnapped John Quinn, the superintendent. On the 8th and 9th he attacked several [illegible] trains, destroying the freight. General Rocha is accused of shooting a number of prisoners.

President Juarez receives the congratulations of the press at the capital. With the exception of the Ferrocarril all the newspapers express the belief that the revolution is a failure, although they differ as to the policy of the government.

William C. Bryant and William H. Hurlbert have received many honors and ovations at the capital from the various associations. They leave for Vera Cruz on the 20th, the government furnishing a special escort of 100 men.

Presentation of the Annual Budget to the Parliament.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Lowe's Treasury Statement—Exhibit of Revenue and Expenditure—How the Postal Telegraph Pays—A Reduction of the Income Tax Proposed.

TELEGRAMS TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

LONDON, March 25, 1872.

The House of Commons to-night went into Committee of Ways and Means, and the Right Hon. Mr. Lowe, Chancellor of the Exchequer, submitted the annual budget. It shows that the estimated total expenditures of the last fiscal year were £72,736,000, while the actual expenditures were £71,720,000. The following items of expenditure fell below the estimates by the amounts noted:—

Interest and management of the public debt	£70,000
Consolidated fund charges	23,000
Army	255,000
Civil Service	595,000
Post Office	21,000
Packet Service	9,000
Collection of the revenue	48,000

The only case in which the actual expenditure exceeded the estimate was in the navy, where the excess was only £8,000. Thus the actual expenditure for the year fell £1,016,000 below the estimates.

The estimated receipts of the last fiscal year from all sources were £72,315,000; the actual receipts were £74,535,000—an increase over the estimates of £2,220,000.

This increase came mainly from the customs, excise, stamps and income tax and is distributed as follows:—

Customs	£200,000
Excise	912,000
Stamps	1,030,000
Income tax	250,000

The receipts from the duties on coffee have declined, but there is a great increase in the revenues drawn from tobacco, wine and spirits.

The receipts from the postal telegraph were £50,000 in excess of the expenses of the service and the payments of interest on stock.

The total of the public debt is stated at £792,740,000.

The total receipts for the financial year 1872–73 are estimated at £74,915,000, including from—

Customs	£20,250,000
Excise	23,240,000
Stamps	10,000,000
Assessed taxes	2,250,000
Income tax	10,000,000
Post Office	4,750,000
Postal telegraph	750,000
Crown land	400,000
Miscellaneous	3,250,000

The total expenditures for the same year are estimated at £71,313,000, including—

Interest and management of the debt	£26,250,000
Consolidated Fund charges	2,000,000
Army	15,000,000
Navy	9,500,000
Civil Service	10,500,000
Collection of Revenue	2,590,000
Post Office	2,500,000
Postal Telegraph	500,000
Abolition of Purchase	1,000,000
Packet Service	1,000,000

The speech in which Mr. Lowe presented the details of the budget was favorably received by the House, and was greeted with cheers at the close.

Mr. Lowe recommended that the duties on coffee and chicory be reduced fifty per cent, and that two pence in a pound be taken off the income tax; but these reductions, he admitted, would oblige him to lower his estimate of the total revenue.

He closed with a motion for the immediate reduction of the duties on coffee and chicory.

EXPLOSION OF NITRO-GLYCERINE.

An Empty Can Explodes Before the Blast—Singular Accident—Two Men Seriously Injured.

POUGHKEEPSIE, March 25, 1872.

A serious nitro-glycerine explosion occurred at the Poughkeepsie and Eastern Railroad on the suburbs of this city to-day. The laborers had charged a blast and led a fuse from it. There was an empty can which had contained glycerine standing near, and, as is usual, it was placed upon the blast to destroy it so that no accident should happen from the careless handling of it, as it is known that even a drop of nitro-glycerine is a dangerous explosive. The foreman, Edward Kelly, put the can on the blast just as the fuse was fired. Almost immediately the can exploded with fearful force, and was blown into a hundred pieces, some of which struck Kelly in the right leg, penetrating it to the bone.

Though partially stunned, and weak from the loss of blood, he had presence of mind enough to know that it was not the blast which had exploded, and so crawled away as quickly as he could, and hid behind an adjacent car to keep clear of the blast. In that spot he was found bleeding freely, and as quickly as possible was taken to the Poughkeepsie Hotel, when Drs. John R. Cooper and Hasbrouck were summoned. The probing of the wound was painful in the extreme. One hole in the man's leg was nearly four inches in diameter, and from it were taken several pieces of the can, bent double. Although terribly injured, Dr. Cooper thinks Kelly will recover, unless tetanus or lockjaw ensues.

Another man, named Luke Whalen, was also terribly injured. Particles of the can struck him in the throat and groin, cutting and tearing the flesh in a fearful manner. He was taken to his home, where Dr. R. K. Tuthill attended him. He, too, may recover, if lockjaw does not set in.

James Leonard was injured in the head slightly. What caused the premature explosion is as yet unknown.

ITALIAN OPERA.

Addio, Nilsson! The Last Night of the Swedish Songstress. Farewell Performance of the One Scene Opera—The Parepa-Rosa Wachtel Santley Season—Pauline Lucca to Appear in the Fall.

The Swedish songstress took leave of the New York public last night before an overwhelming audience, who patiently waited for the only tolerable scene in the opera of "Hamlet"—namely, the last one. In this, despite the meagre surroundings, Miss Nilsson aroused her hearers to unwonted enthusiasm, and made them forget, to a certain extent, the ennui consequent on listening to the dreary, ill-arranged music that preceded this scene. It is perfectly unaccountable how any composer occupying a prominent position in the Conservatoire of Paris could be guilty of such palpable injustice as to appropriate, without any acknowledgment, the ideas of others into an ill-assorted potpourri and call it an opera. We have already spoken at length about the ridiculous character of the libretto, but it may be necessary to refer in detail to the composer's share in the desecration of one of Shakspeare's noblest tragedies.

The opera of "Hamlet" has twenty-four musical numbers, nineteen of which were given with considerable pruning in the version presented at the Academy of Music. We can summarize them thus:—No. 1—Prelude, march and chorus, taken in substance from "Le Prophète," Meyerbeer, with a very commonplace ending, à la Offenbach. No. 2—Recitative and duet, Hamlet and Ophelia. Very incongruous flute and harp passages in the beginning and a theme founded upon the terzetto from "Attila." This is the motif of "Hamlet" throughout the opera, and leads into a second theme, which is also an extract from Verdi. No. 3—Laertes' only solo; melody very uninteresting and fit only for one of Hervé's opéras bouffes. No. 4—Chorus of officers and pages. A well-known Thuringian volkslied, which may be heard at the festive gatherings of any of our German singing societies. No. 5—Scene on the esplanade, in which Hamlet, Marcellus, Horatio and the Ghost appear. Instrumentation founded on the incantation scene from "Der Freyschütz" in some phrases, note for note. The motif of the Ghost is given by the 'cello, and is a thoroughly Meyerbeer theme. No. 6—Garden scene and aria, Ophelia. If Gounod had not written the garden scene in "Faust," M. Thomas would have been obliged to seek ideas elsewhere, for this is an exact copy. The second motif sounds strangely like an aria from "Maria di Rohan." No. 7—Arioso, the Queen, founded upon a song by Abt, and occasionally wandering into unknown paths in the way of queer instrumentation. No. 8, duo, King and Queen, with the song of Hamlet repeated at the conclusion of the scene and poorly orchestrated. Only one short theme of the duet was given, nine pages being omitted, and, judging from the "score," with judgment. No. 9, chorus of players. Taken bodily from "L'Africaine," being one of the themes of the "Indian March." No. 10, drinking song Hamlet. An old German students' drinking song. No. 11, Danish march and chorus of courtiers. This march resembles very much the "Schillermarsch" of Meyerbeer. No. 12, pantomime and finale, is unworthy of any musician, being aimless, noisy and ineffective. No. 13 is the celebrated monologue, or, as the libretto has it, "To be or not—to die, to sleep, to dream, mystery! perhaps." This is a stately, dignified movement, weak only in the vocal part. Meyerbeer has helped M. Thomas again here in the instrumentation. No. 15, the aria for the bass being omitted is the trio between Ophelia, Hamlet and the King, and No. 16, the scene between Hamlet and his mother, in which the ghost makes his final appearance. There are some beautiful ideas in both these numbers, but they are like flowers in a wilderness of weeds. Mr. Thomas being evidently at a loss how to use them. The last numbers include the ballet music, of which there are forty two pages of very commonplace dance themes, with a few of Scandinavian origin and the celebrated mad scene of Ophelia. In this Nilsson is superb, and her acting and singing will always carry an audience with her. Such was the case last night. Few artists would have been able to struggle successfully against the poverty stricken surroundings and "penny wise and pound foolish" management that endeavored in every way to kill the opera, but Nilsson did it. The last scene was the solitary gleam of light in the dreary gloom of the opera. How much better would it have been to have allowed Miss Nilsson to bid farewell to New York in either of her greatest roles, Lucia or Violetta? "Hamlet" should have been brought out earlier in the season in proper style, as the constant postponement and extravagant promises led people to suppose that there was something in it worthy of the grand subject. When we look back upon this remarkably successful season, we can only come to the conclusion that in no other city in the world is operatic genius more generally recognized and patronized, where a single prima donna carried off all the honors and commanded homage, even though surrounded by mediocrity and incompetency.

Miss Nilsson made her début in this country in concert at Steinway Hall, on September 17, 1870, and sang during the season that followed in 120 concerts. On the evening of October 23, 1871, she made her début in New York in opera, appearing with Brignoli in "Lucia di Lammermoor." She has sung so far in one hundred operatic performances. She goes to Washington to-day, and will return to give a farewell matinée at Wallack's on April 6. She is engaged as the principal attraction at Drury Lane, in Her Majesty's Opera, during the summer season. In the fall she makes her debut at the Imperial Opera House, St. Petersburg, and her engagements in Europe are of such a nature that it is extremely doubtful if she return to America before many years have past. She will then reappear under another name, we suppose, as her marriage takes place in Paris early in the fall.

Next week one of the most remarkable seasons of opera ever known in this country will be inaugurated by Mr. Carl Rosa, who has already achieved the extraordinary result of making English opera a grand success on a grand scale in this country. The opening opera on Monday will be the "Trovatore," with Mme. Parepa-Rosa as Leonora, Miss Adelaide Phillipps as Azucena, Herr Wachtel as Manrico and Mr. Santley as the Count di Luna. "Rigoletto" will be sung on Wednesday with the following cast:—Gilda, Mme. Parepa Rosa; Maddelena, Miss Phillipps; the Duke of Mantua, Wachtel; Rigoletto, Santley; Sparafrecile, Aynsley Cook. On Friday we are promised "Don Giovanni," with Mme. Rosa as Donna Anna, Miss Clara Doria as Donna Elvira, Mme. Vanzini as Zerlina, Tom Karl as Don Ottavio, Santley as Don Giovanni, Hermanns as Leporello and Ronconi as Masetto. The chorus and orchestra will number fully one hundred and twenty strong, and exertions are being made to mount the operas in superior style. "The Huguenots" (Gli Ugonotti) will be brought out on Whit Monday.

Yesterday a contract was entered into between the directors of the Academy of Music and Messrs. Maretzek and Jarrett, by which the latter are accorded the privilege of giving Italian Opera during the next season. The principal engagement known of so far under this management is the celebrated prima donna, Pauline Lucca, who will make her operatic début in America probably in September. A number of other important engagements for the company to support Mlle. Lucca are in negotiation, and will be made known early in the summer. Miss Kellogg has been already engaged, and likely many of the leading artists of Mr. Mapleson's company at Drury Lane, London. Never again can the dangerous experiment of attempting to bring a season to a financially successful close with a prima donna as the sole attraction be repeated at the Academy of Music. We trust that the new management, which has the advantage of long and varied experience, will endeavor to remove the bad impressions of the season just past and present each opera with due regard to ensemble, mise en scene and appointments.

COMMITTEE OF SEVENTY.

Mr. William F. Havemeyer, the chairman of the Committee of Seventy, was in his place last evening at the meeting of that body. The session was comparatively short, but earnest, and the announcement, made from information received, that the different city departments had $60,000 to defeat the charter at Albany, did not disconcert the members in the least. Every member of the committee who spoke, whether democrat or republican, expressed himself confident of the passage of the charter substantially as it was submitted to the Legislature by the committee last evening. Messrs. THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Blue Monday in Both Houses and Little Work.

Powers and Duties of County Treasurers.

A Bill Relating to the Court of Appeals—The Rapid Transit Railroad Schemes—Pleas for the Pretty Waiter Girls—Convicts' Bodies To Be Cut Up.

ALBANY, March 25, 1872.

Not many of the members of the Legislature who left here on Friday and Saturday last had returned this evening. When both Houses met there was a fair attendance of Senators, but a quorum could not be counted in the lower house. The week's work will really begin to-morrow, the new charter being the special order in the Senate immediately after the reading of the Journal. The case of Senator James Wood will probably be disposed of during the week, and the discussion that is expected to arise over the report of the committee, taken in connection with the resolution which Mr. Chatfield offered the other day, expelling Mr. Wood, will undoubtedly create some sensation both in and out of the Senate. There will be plenty of scope for some of the Senators to ventilate their views on

THE SUBJECT OF BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION.

It has been suggested that as yesterday was the Sabbath Mr. Chatfield "wrastled in prayer" all day, for this evening he called from the table his resolution for Mr. Wood's expulsion, and it was made the special order for next Thursday. There was very little business done in either house this evening. Most of the time of both bodies was spent in the consideration of bills in general orders. Among the few new bills introduced in the Senate was one by Mr. Benedict for the regulation of tenement and lodging houses in New York and Brooklyn, especially with reference to everything relating to their sanitary condition and the comfort and convenience of the occupants. Mr. O'Brien presented an act to incorporate the German Mannergesang Verein Colonia in New York, the object of which is stated to be to promote a taste for vocal and instrumental music, and to foster social intercourse and intellectual culture among its members. Mr. Tiemann's bill in relation to places of public amusement in New York, which was particularly intended to apply to those

WHERE PRETTY WAITER GIRLS ARE EMPLOYED,

including the lager beer gardens, was considered this evening in the Senate, and was finally ordered to a third reading, but not until the section prohibiting the sale of wine, beer or liquors, or the serving of any refreshments by the pretty waiter girls, had been stricken out altogether and also the section providing that the posting of a notice on the door of the building or at some place near the entrance to the garden should be considered equivalent to the personal service of an injunction on the proprietor or manager. The bill in relation to the

and to authorize proceedings against them was also ordered to a third reading. It prescribes how they shall keep their accounts, prohibits them using public moneys for any personal purposes, directs their books to be kept open for public inspection at all reasonable hours, prohibits advances on claims until audited by the Board of Supervisors, prevents Treasurers from having any interest whatever in claims, and provides for the prosecution by the Attorney General of any county treasurer who shall violate any of its provisions.

A novel scene was witnessed in the Assembly this evening. For the first time in the history of the State the session was opened with PRAYER BY A COLORED MAN.

Everybody was taken by surprise when the Speaker, after calling the members to order, gave place to his colored brother, Mr. Rhodes, minister of the African Methodist church. The Rev. Mr. Rhodes is a very dark divine, so far as complexion is concerned, but he made a very short and very sensible prayer. The members were delighted with it, especially because it was so short; for, in one respect at least, the members are unlike the Pharisees—they do not delight in long prayers.

No business of special importance was transacted in the lower house. A large number of bills, selected by the Speaker and the Clerk, were referred to the Sub-Committee of the Whole. Mr. Niles introduced a bill which provides that any telegraph company now owning or using any telegraph line either wholly or partly within this State may become a body corporate and entitled to the benefit of the provisions contained in the act passed June 29, 1853, on filing in the office of the Secretary of State a certificate of a resolution adopted by a majority of its board of directors to organize under the act of June, 1853, above mentioned. Mr. Miles also introduced a bill to amend the first section of the act relating to the Court of Appeals, so that it shall read that the Court of Appeals instituted by the sixth article of the constitution shall possess all the powers and jurisdiction of the existing Court of Appeals, and all laws authorizing and regulating appeals to the last mentioned Court and other laws relating thereto, the Judges thereof, their powers and duties, and not inconsistent with the constitution or with this act, shall be deemed in force and applicable to the Court first mentioned, and to the Judges thereof; provided, however, that no existing law which relates to the rehearing of cases in such Court shall be in force, and that every appeal brought before the said Court which shall not be decided within four months after its final submission shall be declared dismissed, and the judgment of the court below shall stand as the final judgment in the action; and provided further, that the Court may prescribe the times and places of holding its terms, except as provided in the next section.

Mr. Whitbeck presented a bill to extend the time allowed to commence and complete the viaducts and railways necessary to carry out the proposed plan of rapid transit upon the viaduct system. It extends the time, so as to allow the company to have two years from the 5th of April next within which to commence the work, four years to complete the same as far as Forty-second street, and six years to complete it to Harlem River.

Mr. Burns introduced a bill providing that when convicts die in the Auburn State Prison, if their relatives or friends do not take the remains away for burial within twenty-four hours after death, the bodies may be given for dissection to the medical universities of Syracuse and Buffalo. The Twenty-third Street Railroad bill, now known as Yeoman's Scheme, he having bought the franchise, was recently reported favorably by the Committee on Railroads of the Assembly, the bill having previously passed the Senate. Mr. Whitbeck said this evening that he had received telegrams from several parties who desire to be heard upon the subject, and accordingly, on his motion, the bill was referred back to the committee for further consideration.

THE STOLEN VOUCHERS.

Banich and Hagerty in Court and Their Counsel Eager for Their Trial at Once—The District Attorney Equally Eager, but Will Not Proceed Without ex-Comptroller Connolly's Presence—A Compromise and Admission of the Accused to Bail.

The case of Banich and Hagerty, against whom, as is well known, have been found two indictments, one for burglariously entering the Comptroller's office and the other for grand larceny in stealing certain vouchers placed for safe keeping in this depository of city accounts, was brought up again yesterday in the Court of Oyer and Terminer. Judge Cardozo, who, during the present term, presides over this branch of our criminal courts, occupied the bench. The prisoners, who had been brought there under the escort of officials attached to the City Prison, looked in excellent physical condition, their appearance certainly hardly justifying the subsequent statements of their counsel about their health having been grievously impaired by their protracted imprisonment. But few spectators were in Court—a fact showing conclusively how rapidly in this great city of perpetual weary unrest for new causes of excitement what is one day a matter of absorbing interest subsides into a matter hardly considered worthy of passing notice.

WHEREABOUTS OF MR. CONNOLLY.

This formed the burden of the opening remarks of District Attorney Garvin. He said that since they last appeared in Court and the counsel for the prisoners, Banich and Hagerty, and himself discussed at length the proposition of proceeding at once with their trial or admit them to bail, he had continued his inquiries and search to ascertain the present whereabouts of ex-Comptroller Connolly. His latest returns from all sources whence he had sought information was that Mr. Connolly could not be found in this country. This search had been most diligent, and he felt it his duty to say that he could not properly try this suit on the part of the people without the presence of Mr. Connolly. He felt bound in justice and honor to say this, and having said this he felt that he had discharged his duty.

GREAT RESPONSIBILITY.

He urged further that in the conduct of this trial great responsibility rested on him. The responsibility was of that very grave character that if he should go on with the trial in the absence of Mr. Connolly and fail to convict the prisoners he would be subjected to great censure. He therefore deemed it his duty to say that he was not prepared or willing to enter now upon the trial. This was not his view alone of the case, but he had consulted others, and their views coincided with his own in this regard.

THE PRISONERS' STANDPOINT.

Counsel for the prisoners said that he had no doubt that the District Attorney's well directed and well-meant efforts to secure the attendance in Court of Mr. Connolly, the complainant in the case, had thus far utterly failed. He had himself been cognizant from several quarters that the District Attorney had a number of men devoted exclusively to the search for Mr. Connolly, and that they had failed in their mission and in securing the personal presence of Mr. Connolly in Court. It only remained for him to insist that the prisoners be admitted to bail, and that they be admitted to bail on the spot, and that the bail be fixed at a reasonable sum, such as were warranted by the circumstances of the case. He gave a brief summary of the robbery of the vouchers, and added that the prisoners had been in close confinement since the 27th of last September—a period of five months, in which time the health of both had been greatly impaired.

TWO INDICTMENTS.

There had been presented against the prisoners two indictments—one for burglary in the third degree and one for grand larceny. In his view no indictment of burglary in the third degree could be predicable of an entrance through the door of the Comptroller's office, and it would be impossible for the prosecution to sustain the indictment. His Honor knew the position of the Comptroller's office, and that the putting in of the hand through a broken glass and opening the door did not constitute burglary in the third degree. Against the prisoners there was really only one indictment, and they ought only to be tried on the indictment of grand larceny.

PRESSURE OF POPULAR TUMULT.

In November last in the General Sessions he moved to quash the indictment and admit the prisoners to bail. Under the pressure of reform then prevailing throughout the country that Court thought it proper to deny the motion. He did not desire to place any other Court in an unpleasant position considering the intimidation and terror scattered throughout the community by what was supposed to be an attempt at municipal reformation, and he therefore advised the prisoners to remain in prison until the proper time, and so that the prosecution could have ample time to prepare itself for the prosecution. The prisoners were kept in prison six weeks before they were indicted.

RAP AT THE GRAND JURY.

This indictment was purely a matter of tyranny and oppression on the part of the Grand Jury, a lawless body, which seemed to think that they could do exactly what they pleased. In this case the complainant was the late Comptroller of this city. It was clear that he was a necessary witness, for he was the custodian of those papers, and he only could prove that he had not them still, which was the presumption of the law.

THE HERALD AS AUTHORITY.

He read an account in the NEW YORK HERALD of the 21st inst. of an "interview" between a HERALD reporter and Mr. Courtney and ex-Judge Fithian, by which it was conclusive, as he claimed, that Mr. Connolly would not appear to testify except in his own cases. It might, therefore, be concluded that he would not be found until his own cases were on trial.

DISDAINING ESCAPE.

In relation to the question of bail he wished to call attention to the fact that the persons knew, through the public prints, that they were to be arrested some days before they were arrested, and had an opportunity to escape, of which they had not availed themselves. On the argument to quash the indictment he had presented what he here renewed, that the people, in their civil and criminal proceedings, presented contradictory theories. In their civil suit they presented the idea that these vouchers had been gradually abstracted from time to time, and that the appearance of a burglary was to cover up this abstraction. This, he claimed, was evident from the wording of the complaint drawn by Mr. O'Conor. In this suit their theory was different, but it presented still more clearly the necessity of the presence of Mr. Connolly.

REASONABLE BAIL DEMANDED.

He proceeded to argue that the parties were entitled to bail, and to reasonable bail. Lately half a million seemed to have been thought reasonable bail, and in one case a citizen had been held to one million of dollars bail, the most tyrannical act which ever took place under a republican government. In this case he insisted that the bail should be made reasonable, according to well settled judicial views, and this, in view of the circumstances of the prisoners, should not be over $2,500 on each indictment.

MR. GARVIN ON THE BAIL QUESTION.

Mr. Garvin said he supposed it must be assumed that these indictments could be maintained; but he did not at all deny that where, as here, after the prosecutor had made every effort to prepare for trial, they found themselves unable to proceed with the trial, the accused were entitled to be bailed; but he did submit that the amount named by the counsel for the prisoner was much too low.

THE JUDGE SETTLES THE MATTER.

Judge Cardozo said that, inasmuch as the District Attorney concedes the fact, in view of the circumstance that he is not able to proceed with the trial, that these prisoners should be bailed, and there is no doubt that he is not only right in that concession, but that his conclusion not to try them at present, in the absence of the late Comptroller, is certainly discreet. There being no dispute between the counsel, that the prisoners are entitled to be bailed, the defendants' counsel claiming that they should be, and Judge Garvin agreeing, there seemed to be nothing left but to fix the amount of bail. The whole rule upon that subject may be summed up in the statement, bail shall always be reasonable in view of the circumstances of each particular case; and, without explaining the reasons which have led me to that conclusion, I have determined that $5,000 on each indictment would be right, and in that amount I will direct the prisoners to be bailed.

Counsel for prisoners—Your Honor will be in Chambers through the day?

Judge Cardozo—I will be there all day, and will be in the Oyer and Terminer, which I will keep open, so that they can be bailed at any time.

RELEASED ON BAIL.

At a quarter to two o'clock the bail for Hagerty and Banich appeared. For Hagerty, Thomas Donohue became bondsman, qualifying for the whole amount. For Banich, Terence F. Smith and James McGowan became sureties. Mr. Smith justifies on 446 East Fifty-first street and personal property, and James McGowan on a house in City Hall place and personal property. Mr. Donohue justifies on No. 40 avenue B and Nos. 34 and 36 Chatham street. The prisoners were then discharged.

EMMA COUCH, THE ALLEGED BLACKMAILER.

The Grand Jury of the Court of Oyer and Terminer have found an indictment against Emma Couch, charging her with an attempt to blackmail Rev. Mr. Carter. The particulars of the case have been published in the HERALD, and no doubt more spicy particulars will be developed when the case comes to trial.

WALLACK'S,
THE GREAT AND CONTINUED SUCCESS
of
THE VETERAN
will for the present delay the
PRODUCTION OF NOVELTIES.
EVERY EVENING UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE,
Mr. Lester Wallack's celebrated drama, in six tableaux,
THE VETERAN.

"The Veteran," as we predicted in anticipation of its production, has proved one of the most successful dramas ever brought out, even at Wallack's, splendid as is its roll of dramatic victories. It would be hard to speak too highly of the perfect smoothness and ease with which the piece now runs. Each character has been cast with admirable regard to the individual capacity and peculiarities of the player. We have already spoken at length in previous notices of the elegance of the setting and mounting, and can only repeat what we said then. The last tableau is a chef d'oeuvre of startling incident and skilful handling of color and costume. The "Veteran" will doubtless run to the end of the season, but we recommend our readers to go there at once, as the piece will bear seeing twice or thrice.—Extract from the New York Herald.

Box book open from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Due notice will be given of the re-appearance of Mr. Charles Mathews, Mr. J. H. Stoddard and Miss Plessy Mordaunt.

"The most gorgeous spectacle ever displayed on the American stage. The magnificence of the scenery, costumes and appointments fairly took away the breath even of experienced playgoers."—New York Herald.

IT IS BEWILDERINGLY BEAUTIFUL AND BRIGHT!!!

"More free and easy dancing; and lavish exposure of female charms than any drama we have hitherto beheld. Even the 'Black Crook' is fairly surpassed by it. The scenes are literally splendid. The Transformation Scene at the close, no description, even in the 'Arabian Nights,' could surpass for sparkling and elaborate splendor."—New York Times.

ITS MUSIC IS RAVISHINGLY SWEET!!!

"Let it be acknowledged that 'Lalla Rookh' is the most stupendous spectacular piece ever seen here. The 'Black Crook' is trivial by its side. * * * It employs magnificently limbed women, some of whom are quite as voluptuous as any Moore ever dreamed of in his most ardent poetic flights. It gives us dances such as ravished the soul of 'Sunset' Cox in Andalusia. * * * The house was crowded to suffocation, and the various scenic surprises were received with generous applause."—New York World.

WASHINGTON.

Warmoth, Pinchbeck and Their Louisiana Henchmen at the Capital.

THE SENATE TARIFF TINKERING

A Statue of Admiral Farragut Proposed.

Treasury and Navy Department Investigations.

The Pennsylvania Oil Conspiracy.

WASHINGTON, March 25, 1872.

Pinchbeck and His Louisiana Supporters Seeking to Interview the President—The Faction Fight Defined.

Lieutenant Governor Pinchbeck, State Senators Harris and Soner and J. W. Fairfax, Assistant Secretary of State, arrived here to-day from Louisiana. These gentlemen come as the representatives of the republican party of Louisiana to consult with the President with regard to the interests of their party in that State. They are all members of the Republican State Central Committee, Governor Pinchbeck being the chairman and Mr. Fairfax the Secretary of the committee. They have called their State Convention for May 2 to nominate State officers and choose Presidential electors and delegates to the Philadelphia Convention. They ignore the Cincinnati Convention, and will have nothing to do with it, as they also repudiate any sympathy with Governor Warmoth in his movement in favor of that convention. They say they supported Warmoth in his fight with the Custom House and Carter faction because they believed him in the right, and that in that fight he had the support of the republican party in their State, but now in his semi-endorsement of the Cincinnati Convention he separates himself from the republican party, and they necessarily oppose him. At the same time they repudiate the idea that the Custom House party represent the republicans of their State. They don't question their loyalty to the party, but they do question their claim to leadership, and to settle this point is the object of the visit here at this time. The delegation have an appointment with the President to-morrow at eleven o'clock. No matter what the result of this interview may be, Pinchbeck's delegates will go to the Philadelphia Convention and make their fight there. They say the republican party of Louisiana is solid for Grant, and that they represent more than nine-tenths of the party.

The Tea and Coffee Tariff Bill.

In the Senate to-day Mr. Sherman suggested that the House bill to repeal the duties on tea and coffee be taken up and passed to-morrow, and that his committee's Tariff bill be postponed till the House had acted upon the tariff. This action of Mr. Sherman was due to a conference held between himself and Mr. Dawes, chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, this morning, at which the whole question of tariff reduction was taken into consideration.

No more than $6,000,000 of duties, after the repeal of the tea and coffee tax, will be taken off foreign imports, mainly by the reduction of the duty on coal and salt and by placing certain chemicals and other non-competing articles on the free list. With regard to internal revenue reductions Mr. Sumner is understood to favor the abolition of certain stamp duties, amounting to $16,000,000, and Mr. Dawes is reported to have the same views. Mr. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, will oppose any such measure on the ground that the taxes proposed to be abolished are self-collecting and for that reason ought to be retained in preference to other classes.

The Cost of the St. Domingo Business.

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, adopted December 20, 1871, calling for an account of the expenses of vessels employed on the coast of St. Domingo since the beginning of negotiations for the acquisition of Dominica, the Secretary of the Navy to-day transmitted to that body a statement showing that the total expenditures on account of such vessels during the time specified—two years—amounted to $490,623. The expenditures were incurred on account of ten vessels in all. The Secretary of the Navy says in his accompanying letter that the expenses were no greater than if the same ships had been in service elsewhere in the West Indies, and somewhat less than if they had been employed on some of the other stations. He adds that the vessels in the waters adjacent to the West Indies are usually nine or ten in number. The Secretary also says that the delay in answering the resolution has been owing to the necessity of waiting for the accounts of Paymasters, &c., some of whom have been transferred to distant stations.

Navy Department Irregularities Committee.

The House special committee to investigate the charges of irregularities in the Navy Department met this evening at the Capitol. Mr. Blair, of Michigan (chairman), read a letter from Mr. Voorhees, in which that gentleman stated that as he was engaged in important lawsuits in Indiana he would not be able to attend to his duties as a member of the committee, and therefore he had declined serving, in order that the vacancy may be filled to-morrow by the Speaker. On the motion of Mr. Sargent the committee adjourned until Tuesday evening. The chairman said he expected at that time to see present the gentlemen who were now here. Secretary Robeson occupied a seat on one side of the table and Charles A. Dana and his counsel, Willard Bartlett, seats on the other. These gentlemen had several large volumes of public documents with them, and there were present as witnesses Dr. Broadhead, Second Comptroller of the Treasury; J. W. King, Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering; Dr. Wood, Medical Director of the Navy; John Lenthal, Naval Constructor; Hugh A. Goldsborough, Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Repairs, and W. H. H. Smith, Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Steam Engineering. Mr. Bartlett made an inquiry about certain papers, when Mr. Blair responded that a letter had been addressed to the Navy Department asking for them. Mr. Bartlett said he would like to have Admiral Porter summoned, and a subpoena was ordered to be issued. The chairman remarked that they would not be able to examine more than two or three witnesses an evening.

The Oil Conspiracy Under Investigation.

The Committee on Commerce of the House were this morning engaged in discussing the doings of the Southern Improvement Company in connection with their control of oil shipments from the oil regions of Pennsylvania, and a sub-committee was authorized (which will be appointed at the next meeting of the committee) to investigate the operations of this company, as well as to look into the general freight tariffs of railroad and transportation companies. A delegation of oil men were before the committee, urging the investigation into the affairs of the company named, who charge upon it gross abuses in connection with oil shipments. They charge an attempt to control all shipments of oil and then advance the price. The investigation will begin early next week.

The United States Treasury Investigation.

The Secretary of the Treasury to-day transmitted to the House of Representatives the report of the committee appointed to examine the office of the Treasurer of the United States. He says the committee consisted of five gentlemen connected with the Treasury Department and two bankers well known to the public. Their report shows that a very thorough examination of the Treasurer's office was made, and its condition is, in the most essential particulars, satisfactory. The Secretary of the Treasury then proceeds to explain several deficiencies in the Treasurer's account arising from the defalcations of the two clerks, Johnson and Merden, aggregating $40,000, and a further deficiency of $11,500 not recovered from a package of $46,000 stolen from the division of issue about two years ago, with other discrepancies to the amount of $466, arising from the loss of coupons, &c., from all of which he thinks the Treasurer should be relieved by act of Congress. It appears, however, that there is a deficiency of coin, as called for by the books, of $653,373 63. This is represented by an excess of currency of $629,407 28, and by the deficiencies before mentioned, with the exception of that arising from the dishonesty of Johnson. Part of the funds of the box of miscellaneous contents enumerated among the assets of the office also consist of similar defective securities and notes, and the Secretary recommends that Congress give relief to the Treasurer by allowing these discrepancies in the accounts to be classed. He also recommends that authority be given to the Secretary of the Treasury to sell or distribute properly such articles among the forty-one special deposits now in charge of the Treasurer as may be valuable, subject to any valid claim that may hereafter be made, and to destroy such of them as may be worthless. The Secretary's letter concludes as follows:—"Upon the whole the result reached by the committee is such as to justify the expression of the opinion that the business of the Treasury has been well conducted, and that the losses in the aggregate are very insignificant as compared with the transactions of the office."

A Statue to Farragut.

Mr. Tyner, of Indiana, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported a joint resolution providing for a colossal statue of Admiral Farragut, to be placed in Farragut square, and providing, further, that models be submitted, from which the committees of both the Senate and the House shall jointly select. The time for selection was limited to sixty days. Mr. Garfield moved to extend the time to January 1, 1873, which was done, and the resolution was adopted. Mr. Cox, of New York, spoke in favor of this proposition, and in doing so paid a fitting tribute of respect to the Admiral for his many virtues and gallant deeds. The committee first recomended the work to be done by Horatio Stone, but Vinnie Ream, hearing of the proposed work, put herself into the field, and through her efforts it was thrown open to competition.

Military Post Traders' Abuses.

The Secretary of War has issued a circular for the correction of the post trader abuses to which the attention of the House Military Committee has lately been directed. It requires all post traders in the army to reside at their stations and to regulate their prices by a counsel of administration appointed from officers of the post, with right of appeal to the War Department against the decisions of the council. The traders are not to assign, transfer or sublet their privileges, and all who are not residing at their posts within ninety days are to vacate their appointments. This circular is based upon inquiries instituted by the Secretary as soon as the irregularities of the post trading system were brought to his attention a few weeks ago, and will probably satisfy the committee that has the subject under consideration.

The Washington Depot Site Bill.

The friends of the Washington Depot Site bill failed in their expectation of passing it under a suspension of the rules. There is some fear that it may be talked to death yet. Mr. Garfield created quite a diversion among the friends of the bill by displaying a map of the grand park laid out by Downing, which proposes to take in all that government reservation extending from the Capitol to the White House, and which Tom Scott has his eye on for a depot site. The determination to put this bill through without change or amendment met with resistance from many members who favor the bill, and will vote for it, but who were in favor of giving an opportunity for discussing it. The friends of the bill were quite sure of a two-thirds vote to suspend the rules; but Mr. Garfield's map played havoc with their plans, and when the announcement of the failure to suspend was made the face of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations wore a satisfied look.

The French Arms Investigation.

The Senate Arms Committee to-day examined J. W. Simonton, General Agent of the New York Associated Press, respecting the origin of the despatch from Paris, February 9, about the alleged action of the Assembly's Committee on War Contracts, &c. Messrs. Littlejohn, Prentiss, Riley and Starbuck were examined as to delivery of arms for France on board of the steamers Ontario and Erie in November, 1870.

Southern Claims Commission.

The Southern Claims Commission had under investigation to-day the claims of John H. Risley, of New York city, for ship timber, lumber, rice and other supplies taken by the military and naval forces of the Union at Georgetown, S. C., and valued by the claimant at $23,500.

The Kentucky War Claims.

The Supreme Court has denied the writ of mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the Kentucky war claims.

Appropriations for Lighthouses.

The Sundry Civil Service Appropriations bill has been partially completed by the House Committee on Appropriations. The following items for lighthouses and beacons and fog signals are recommended by the sub-committee on the subject, and it is understood will be reported by the committee without material alteration:—

The Freedmen's Bureau.

An official communication from General Whittlesey, temporarily in charge of the Freedmen's Bureau, says that the law abolishing the bureau requires the continuance of the Freedmen's Hospital in Washington, and the payment of bounty prize money, &c., to colored soldiers, sailors and marines in every part of the country, and that the total amount appropriated for this purpose for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1872, is $165,500. This is $100,000 less than the Commissioner asked for. Every effort has been made to bring the expenditure within the amount appropriated, by reducing the number of agents and clerks to the lowest possible point consistent with an efficient execution of the law; but now the funds are nearly exhausted. Should all the bills and claims be paid at the end of this month only about $1,000 would remain.

The Columbus Convention Candidates.

It appears that the non-acceptance of the nomination by the candidates named at the Columbus Convention is an understood thing among the knowing ones, and that no such acceptance will be made until after the Cincinnati Convention. It was not, and is not, the desire of the labor reformers that their candidates shall be trammelled with a positive candidacy, but that they shall be free to go into the Cincinnati Convention and seek a nomination here, or even into a democratic convention, should one be held and should they desire to go there. They declare that the only object of the Columbus Convention was to select two good and strong men with a view to their being accepted by the other conventions, and then they would expect their reward for the start they had given them in the Presidential race.

John Bright's Son in the House.

John Albert Bright, son of the distinguished English statesman, John Bright, was on the floor of the House to-day and was introduced to the Speaker and many members of the House.

RETRIBUTION!

A GLORIOUS DAY FOR JERSEY CITY.

The First of the Frauds and the Last of the Ring—Jersey Justice Again Vindicated—Municipal Corruption Gone to Its Rest—A Crushing Blow from the Attorney General—Judge Bedle Lays It In Its Little Bed.

Yesterday was the sixth day of the trial of the Police Commissioners and Chief of Police of Jersey City for conspiring to defraud the city. After the opening of the Court Mr. Stout proceeded to sum up on the part of the State. He was followed by Messrs. Winfield and Abbett for the defence.

The Attorney General then rose to close the case for the State. He fully agreed with the counsel for the defence on the folly and wickedness of a jury allowing any partisan feelings to influence their verdict. It would be a great misfortune if it should go abroad that this jury would allow any such considerations to influence their action in this case; but your investigation should be directed against any man who takes money from the public treasury for any purpose or for anybody's use. Both the defendants and their counsel have entirely misapprehended the case. All the evidence they have adduced has had no bearing whatever on the case brought against them. Four times in the month of October last, four times in November and four times in December false statements were made in these pay rolls, and on these false statements money was drawn from the public treasury. The defendants have not attempted to answer why they made these false statements. The case against them is that they ordered false statements to be made on the pay rolls of Captains McHorney, Van Riper, Parker and Benson. Whenever a man's character is attacked for dishonesty it is the duty of counsel and of the defendant himself to lay open the acts of that man so that he may exculpate himself. The Police Commissioners directed the Chief to order the false returns to be made. The Chief gave the order and the order was carried out by the captains. Twelve times have the false returns been made, and there is not one word of explanation. When the defendants talk about what their intention was, they fall wide of the mark. The money went out of the city treasury and the evidence shows and the pay rolls show where the money went. The records adduced here are startling. Why, the public interests are in danger if such a system of paying away the public money be allowed. These men may pretend what they please about their intentions, but it was their intention that this money should go out and that it should never return unless it was discovered. The charter says that the proceedings of the several boards of the city government shall be public and that they shall keep a correct record of their proceedings so that the public, whose trustees they are, may know what they are doing and what they are about. Why did they not make this proceeding public? If the people of Jersey City had known that these men were advancing $200 on the pay of the captains what would they have said? You are making a political machine of the power conferred on you and conferred for the benefit of the city. The public money is sacred and these men should keep their hands clean. They did this not at a public meeting but during a recess of the Board. The main question is, were their acts open, public, honest? They would not dare to do it publicly, for the people would not submit to it. If the representations of the officers who wanted the advance were correct why did not the Commissioners put their hands in their own pockets and make the advance instead of putting them in the public treasury? The charter provides that no money shall be paid out of the city treasury until the obligation is incurred. The public is the employer of these men, and the public have a right to know what these men are doing, and how can the public know? Why, by providing in the charter that these men shall keep a correct record of their proceedings. What is the consideration in this case for the advance? Mr. Pritchard tells us because the men had been liberal in contributing for political purposes. Why, gentlemen of the jury, thousands and millions of dollars have been taken from the people of the city of New York just on the same motives. This is one of the boldest things I ever saw done in any country. The pay roll on the face of it shows that. Did a mortal in Jersey City know that they were making this advance? Not one except the Commissioners and their officers. It was only when the Grand Jury—the learned Grand Jury—by their extraordinary power, drew these pay rolls that it was ascertained that the public money had been spent where it ought not to have been spent.

Section 39 of the rules for the government of the police force provides that no assessment shall be levied on members of the police department. So far as the unworthiness of the motive goes, I suppose that three of these defendants, Gross, Hutton and Goetze, are not to be charged with it, for they did not know anything about it. The whole business is a disgraceful thing to have among us and I would wish from my heart it were otherwise. If a burglar enters your house he always leaves an opening so that he can get out. These men had been consulting about this transaction in June, July and August, and they arranged it in this manner, "If we are found out we can say that we intended to return it." It is no excuse when you take public money or private money without the permission of the owner to say, "Oh! but I will return it." There is not a case of embezzlement where a man does not intend to return the money he takes. The very essence of theft is this—you don't let the man know who has a right to know. A clerk is bound to give a true statement of the affairs of his principal, and these men are but the clerks of the public. The intention to return is not equal to the money in the treasury—it is no answer at all. Their mode of procedure was this—privately they ordered false pay rolls to be made out, and publicly they order those false pay rolls to be paid. Not a dollar did they attempt to return by way of restitution till the cause was set down for trial. The 16th of January was the day when the inspector was spoken to about the reduction, and, gentlemen, that 16th of January is a very suspicious day for such an order. That was the day the Grand Jury was charged about these things, and I have no doubt that charge caused a flutter in the Police Department. The receipts show on their face in express words that the advance is not a loan, but "in full for salary to date." The whole transaction shows that to-day the police captains are the masters of the Commissioners. The more I examine this proceeding the plainer the truth becomes that the Commissioners are mere puppets in their hands. These men (the Commissioners) went on the stand, and when they got through they had not begun to answer this case—they gave no answer. They tell you about their intentions, but the facts are against them. If the question is then put to you gentlemen, whether you are going to find them guilty of perjury, you can say to them, "No; but here (holding up the pay rolls) are the silent witnesses, the irrefutable witnesses that contradict you." Gentlemen, you must deal with this question fairly, firmly, and with a full sense of the weighty responsibility resting upon you. We are living in times of great corruption. If there were no public robbery most of the people of this world could get along with half what they require now. The whole of the land of England was stolen by a public robber, and the title by which that public robber's estate is held is what keeps the people of England poor to-day. If we are not to have common honesty in these commissions now in our public departments, and especially if we have not common honesty in these commissions placed over our city, our republican government is short-lived and the bulwarks of our popular institutions are gone. It is for you, gentlemen, to furnish the corrective, and it is from you that I confidently ask that verdict which will be a righteous and a just one, and that is a verdict of guilty.

During the delivery of the Attorney General's argument, which occupied an hour and a half, and was listened to by the largest crowd that was perhaps ever packed into the court room, the silence was profound. Whether in the rising or the falling inflection his voice penetrated every corner of the building, and his oratory, combined with a long array of facts and figures, swept away the webs which the counsel for the defence had thrown over the evidence to mystify the jury. Before he had time to resume his seat Judge Bedle's hammer fell heavily to repress the rising storm of applause. One of the Commissioners pulled his mustache nervously, but could not persuade his eyes to glance higher than the table; another crouched into an angle formed by two desks; a third looked among his friends for relief, with a countenance suggestive of a nine weeks' [illegible] in the Catacombs, while the remaining two, who had been treated somewhat lightly, eyed their companions and looked hopeless. Not one of them could look boldly out on the sea of faces, for every face was expressive of rebuke. This painful interval was ended by Judge Bedle, whose gavel again fell, and he proceeded to deliver the following charge:—

Gentlemen of the jury—In this case the defendants—[illegible] M. [illegible], Isaiah Hutton, Thomas A. Gross, [illegible] Edmonson, Frederick A. Goetze and Edward [illegible] McWilliams—are charged with conspiring to [illegible] the Mayor and Aldermen of Jersey City. [illegible] the counsel [illegible] for those of you who have been in the jury box and those of us who have been on the bench [illegible] the only way for us is to discharge [illegible] duties fearlessly and faithfully, and [illegible] consequences go to the winds. Providence will take care of them. There is no dispute [illegible] the evidence which shows [illegible] McWilliams received $150, and the captains, Inspector and Health Inspector $50 each [illegible] for the latter half of October [illegible] relates to the payroll for [illegible] difference—that the increase [illegible] was given by common consent of all the defendants, while that to the Chief was not agreed to [illegible] the defendants. A warrant was issued for $2,[illegible] the Police Commissioners for salaries due for the second half of October. If this money was paid out by the guardians of the city treasury on such representations the Court charge that, no matter what the intent of the parties was, that the transaction was a fraud, the guardians of the city having been deceived. In an indictment for conspiracy you must find at least two guilty. It does not follow that because all these defendants are named in the indictment they are equally guilty. Two or three may be innocent of the charge in this indictment. The Court charge that even if that money paid out was an advance, it was unlawful, for the charter does not permit it. If the motive was to increase the pay of the captains beyond what they were entitled to receive as salary that would be fraud. These men are tied down by the city charter, and if they, for the purpose of raising money for political purposes or for the private purpose of the men, made the advance they would be guilty of fraud, for it would be regarded by the law as a defiance of the statute. It must have been an advance given with an honest purpose and under the conviction that they had the right to make the advance in order to warrant the conclusion that it was not a fraud. I think that Gross, Hutton and Goetze swear that they knew nothing whatever about contributions for political purposes.

Attorney General—Yes, all three.

Judge Bedle—Very well. It may have been that the other three, Pritchard, Edmonson and McWilliams, had this ulterior purpose of raising money for political purposes, but that is for you, gentlemen, to say whether there is a distinction. Pritchard says:—"I rather favored the idea of advancing something on the salaries, because the men had been very liberal in contributing for political purposes." If your clerk's salary of fifty dollars be due on a certain day, and your clerk puts down in your book, "Received the sum of fifty dollars on account of salary in advance," you know what that means, but if he writes down "received the sum of $100, in full for salary to date," he may say what he pleases about it, but what do you say about it, gentlemen of the jury? What is the character of the act? What is the motive? Honesty acts in a certain way, and dishonesty develops itself in a certain way. One of the principles in determining the motive of an act is secrecy. If to advance the salaries they did it not in one of their open meetings, as required by the charter, but in secret, it is for you to say, gentlemen, how far that bears on the motive for the act. There was nothing by which the city could gather the slightest idea that there had been an advance. You have also a right to look at the recklessness of the consequences to the city. This was the city's money, and let us ask was there any arrangement as to interest? These policemen are very uncertain men. Suppose any of them had been dismissed, what provision was made that the money could be recovered? It is against the law to have money advanced to them. It is against the policy of the law. Yet there was no arrangement as to how it should be paid back and when it should be paid back. This recklessness you must look upon as bearing on the question of intent. If these men were guided by an honest purpose why did they not say so openly and plainly, so that the city might understand what they were doing? Here is a receipt "in full for salary to date." Is that true, gentlemen? It is for you to reconcile this with the statements of the defendants. The Court will leave it entirely to you to judge, in the light of the law, what was the motive for the payment of this money. It appears in the evidence that McWilliams received $150 in advance, the captains and Dickson $50 each; and these amounts correspond exactly with the sums they paid for political purposes. Now, gentlemen, you may retire.

The jury retired at twenty minutes before five, and there were surmises that they would remain out for several hours. The audience did not disperse, however. Knots were collected here and there, discussing the probabilities and every one manifesting great interest in the result. At seven o'clock precisely a heavy pounding was heard at the door of the jury room, and the constable who was charged to withold "meat and drink" from them in a certain contingency opened the door and received the announcement that they had agreed.

Judge Bedle, accompanied by Associate Justices Brinkerhoff, resumed his seat, and the jury were called in. The crowd outside had in the meantime nearly filled the court room. In response to the usual formula and amidst a breathless silence the foreman answered firmly, "We find the defendants GUILTY in manner and form as they stand charged." At the request of Mr. Winfield, counsel for the defence, the jury were polled, and each pronounced the word "Guilty."

Thus ends the first of a series of trials in which more municipal corruption will be developed than any city in the Union is cursed with, not even excepting the seat of Tammany. The trial of Bumsted, Vreeland and Walsh for conspiracy to defraud the city will be commenced this morning. This is probably the most aggravated case of all.

SMALLPOX.

The rapidity with which this dreadful disease is spreading all over the city has at length become alarming, and the health authorities have instituted the most rigorous measures to check its further progress. One hundred and fifteen cases were reported to the city Sanitary Bureau during the past week, making the largest exhibit of any week since the virus made its appearance in New York. This unusually large increase in the number of cases is explained by the city Sanitary Inspector in the alarm of the medical men having charge of the cases on the east side. Last week a number of doctors were prosecuted by the Board of Health for having failed to report cases they were attending to. This action of the Board has so frightened others that who were in charge of cases of smallpox and were attending to them in secret have come forward and reported the fact of their existence. This would no doubt go far to increase the number of cases, but independent of this the assistant Health Inspectors have themselves discovered fifteen new cases, which goes undoubtedly to show the disease is steadily growing. Mr. A. T. Stewart has likewise taken fright at the prevalence of the epidemic, and yesterday sent one of his young men to request the Sanitary Inspector to send a sufficient force of medical men to vaccinate all the people in his employ. The Tenth and Seventeenth wards are those suffering most from smallpox, and it is astonishing the people will not take advantage of the means at their disposal of guarding against the disease. Every station house in the city is supplied with a medical man to vaccinate all comers, free of charge, and when it has been so clearly shown that vaccination is a sure preventive of the disease it is wonderful that people don't fortify themselves against it.

Marine Disasters.

BARK INDIA (Rus), 120 days from Rotterdam for New York, was spoken by the bark Sarah, at Vineyard Haven from Buenos Ayres, on the 15th inst, in lat 37 45, lon 69 40, with jibboom and rudder gone and out of provisions and water. The Sarah supplied her with water, but had no provisions to spare.

SCHR MARY B MAHONEY, Anderson, from Port Johnson for Taunton, at Newport 23d, reports 1 AM 21st, blew away mainsail and jibes foresail, carrying away forehoom. While trying to transfer foresail to mainmast drifted to leeward, and drawing near Block Island vessel badly iced and tried to let go anchors, but being frozen on the bow and hawse holes filled with ice some time elapsed before they could be cleared, and when they were let go the vessel brought up on a lee shore with only 12 feet of water. She lay in this position 19 hours, resisting endeavors to kedge her off and pounding heavily on the bottom. At the end of this time succeeded in getting her off with the assistance of the Independent Wrecking Company, Captain Darius B Dodge.

SCHR ASHORE—The pilot of steamer Galatea, at Providence 24th, from New York, reports a large schr ashore, about a quarter of a mile north of Point Judith (apparently light, high up on the beach; she lies in an easy position heading NW; the seas are breaking outside of her.

SCHR ASHORE—The Providence Journal says:—A schr, name unknown, of about 240 tons burden, loaded with spruce lumber and bound to Providence, ran ashore near Conanicut Light last Wednesday, and bilged; crew all saved. [We give the above as it came to us on Saturday; but it is probable that the vessel was the schr Mary E Graham, reported below.]

SCHR MARY E GRAHAM, from Jacksonville for Fall River, before reported ashore at Beaver Tail with four feet of water in her hold, was got off on Saturday, after lightering, by steamtug Charlotte & Isabella, and towed into Newport.

SCHR T D WILDER—The greater portion of the cargo of the above vessel will be saved in good condition, but the vessel will be a total loss.

SCHR BAY STATE—The schooner before reported on Saybrook Bar since the 17th inst, proves to be the Bay State, of St George, Me, from Hoboken for Somerset, with a cargo of 185 tons coal. The vessel and cargo will probably be a total loss. The Bay State registers 69 tons, and was built at Scituate in 1846.

The men reported that several vessels had passed near them, but would not take them off; one of the three drowned had got discouraged and dropped into the water after one vessel had thus passed.

FAYAL, Feb 24—The County of Pictou, of Glasgow, Erskine, from Bull River for London, 17 days, put in here Feb 13 (as previously reported), with rudder head split, main hatch stove, two deck beams broken and cargo shifted; she has unshipped her rudder, for which purpose she had to discharge about 160 tons of cargo.

The Cattarina, from New York for Falmouth, which put in here Feb 5, leaky, &c., has discharged a large portion of her cargo to clear the pumps and to benefit a portion of the wheat, much heated, and is repairing. A small quantity of wheat, completely rotten, has been thrown into the sea.

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 25, 1872.

ARRIVAL OF THE CORRESPONDENT.

To the amazement, and yet to the great satisfaction, of the public here the HERALD correspondent who has been for nearly ten days past in the swamps of the Carolina outlaws returned to Wilmington this afternoon by the Charlotte road, which traverses the Scuffletown district. Up to the time of his arrival in Wilmington little or no hope was indulged of his safety, in view of the threats against him which have recently been made by the outlaws. His safe arrival in Wilmington this afternoon

CREATED AN INTENSE EXCITEMENT, and despite the fearfully stormy weather the HERALD correspondent was the object of curiosity and the HERALD was the theme of discussion and praise. The universal sentiment in Wilmington is that the HERALD correspondent is the hero of a wonderful feat of daring, and there is universal rejoicing that he has finally escaped the great perils which have for more than a week past environed him. Details given by your correspondent regarding his adventures among the outlaws confirm the accounts given in the HERALD despatches of the

PERIL AND DIFFICULTIES

which he has undergone. He left for New York this afternoon, and will give to the HERALD the fullest possible details of his thrilling adventures. On Friday last your correspondent was taken by the outlaws farther into the swamp, and from Rhody Lowery's cabin to several of their most secret hiding places. At the moment of leaving Rhody's cabin the HERALD correspondent experienced the greatest sense of personal danger suffered by him during his career with the outlaws. Tom Lowery had especially urged the killing of the

CONDUCTED BY THEM BLINDFOLDED

"DAMNED YANKEE,"

and as the other outlaws conducted him away from Rhody's cabin, with the remark to Rhody that he would never see daylight again, your correspondent had little hope but that Tom Lowery's savage threat would be executed. Conducted by the outlaws through the swamp blindfolded, except when his captors chose to remove the bandage, he traversed the swamp, in some places wading almost

WAIST DEEP IN WATER,

and again reaching solid ground, thus gaining one of the hiding places of the outlaws, which he inferred to be situated upon an island. The blindfold was removed, and he found himself an inmate of a low, pitched cabin, in which a moderately tall man could not possibly stand erect. In this cabin were from

THIRTY TO FORTY SHOT GUNS

but no smaller arms. The outlaws would not permit him to look out of the window and make any observations of the surroundings. He was told that he was already the possessor of more of their secrets outside of their gang, and more than they intended anybody else should ever have access to again. While in the swamps your correspondent was repeatedly informed by the outlaws of their suspicions that he would attempt to chloroform them, and that he was a government spy sent to repeat the rôle in which the Detective Saunders had been caught by them.

A DEMOCRATIC DEMON.

He was also told by Steve Lowery that a prominent democrat of Robeson county had given them information that he was a federal spy and that he would undoubtedly do them great harm before he left them.

"Still," said Steve, "we believe that you are honest, and we will trust you; but

DON'T UNDERTAKE TO COME HERE AGAIN,

because you know too many of our secrets." Steve then added, "We have trusted three other men besides you and they all betrayed us, but still we will trust you and let you you can about us." After leaving the swamps the outlaws carried your correspondent on Sunday back to Rhody's cabin, and this morning accompanied him to Moss Neck,

GIVE THE HERALD ALL THE INFORMATION

WAVING A FRIENDLY ADIEU TO HIM

as the train left. As a mark of their confidence in the honesty of his intentions toward themselves, the outlaws gave the HERALD correspondent

A DOUBLE-BARRELLED SHOT GUN,

formerly belonging to Henry Berry Lowery, the deceased outlaw chief, and Steve Lowery presented him with three silver pieces, to be given, one to his wife, another to his baby, and the third to be kept by himself as a souvenir of his trip among the Carolina outlaws. Your correspondent is warm in his acknowledgment of Rhody's services to himself in aiding him to retain the confidence of the outlaws, and

PRAISES HER COURAGE

and intelligence. Rhody carried him to many points of interest, among others to the grave of the unfortunate Saunders, a spot which the outlaws seemed to dread visiting with a remarkable superstitious apprehension. Upon one occasion the HERALD correspondent was within half a mile of the grave of Saunders and begged the outlaws to but they refused, as they also did to visit the graves of other victims of their vengeance.

The satisfaction of the community of Wilmington at the safe arrival in their midst of the daring HERALD correspondent is heightened by his confirmation of the previous tidings from him of the deaths of Henry Berry Lowery and of Boss Strong, the second in cleverness and courage of the gang of outlaws. During the absence of your correspondent in the swamps the excitement in Wilmington was at fever heat and found some curious forms of expression.

INTEREST IN THE HERALD MAN.

Mrs. Oates' dramatic troupe was performing at the Wilmington Theatre, and Mr. Allen, one of the troupe, recited, amid the greatest merriment, the following:—

"Oh, have you heard the news
From Robeson so flowery?
Lowery has the HERALD man;
But the HERALD ain't got Lowery."

AN ILLUSIONIST WANTS HIM.

Another incident, illustrative of public interest here in the recent career of the HERALD correspondent, now so happily escaped from the clutches of the outlaws, was the offer made to him by the agent of De Castro, the Illusionist, of one hundred dollars per night if he would appear in a private box of the theatre during the performance of De Castro and permit the announcement of the presence of the HERALD correspondent.

FIRST LETTER FROM OUR CAPTURED CORRESPONDENT.

SCUFFLETON, ROBESON COUNTY, N. C., March 20, 1872.

That the thrilling pictures given in the HERALD of the outlaws of the Robeson county swamps, in North Carolina, with the history of their deeds of daring, murder and rapine, had awakened a deep sensation over the United States, was everywhere evident. It seemed incredible that a band of five men should persistently defy a community such as the Old North State. The criminal supineness of the State authorities, the inactivity of the federal government and the terrorized condition of the inhabitants of the district all expressed an anomalous condition of affairs which

CALLED FOR THE FULLEST INVESTIGATION.

The account given by another correspondent had exhausted all the information surrounding the gang, had given graphic sketches of the now famous mulatto settlement, with its ominous name of Scuffletown, had detailed the outrages by the gang and traced back their history to the days of the rebel fortifications at Wilmington, when Henry Berry Lowery first took to the swamps, to avoid impressment to work with the slaves of the Southern planters. Escaped federal prisoners, too, from the Confederate prison at Florence, S. C., were seen flitting across the swamps and of the free negro settlement of Scuffletown to take their places awhile with Henry Berry Lowery and his fellows in the swamps. By and by came the swamp of Sherman's army to the sea, and it was related how the "bummers" found guides and supporters among the free mulattoes of Scuffletown. It came out, too, in a ghastly way, that the rebel whites of the district, wishing to wreak their vengeance on the colored people, came in the night to old Allan Lowery's cabin, and, dragging forth himself and his son William, mercilessly

RIDING FURTIVELY AMONG THE SHANTIES

SHOT THEM, FATHER AND BOY,

with the one volley, and then went their way, putting two of their supposed enemies out of the way only to create a pack of avenging devils in the persons of the old man's sons and their outlawed friends. The war closed, and, rightly or wrongly, the white people of Robeson county, true to their murder of the father, exempted the Lowerys from the act of oblivion. How truly has it been said that "we can never forgive those we have injured!" The end of the strife between North and South brought no peace to Scuffletown. The "angels" were in the swamps robbing by day, murdering by night; the rebels had become Ku Klux, and from fighting manfully in the sunlight were trooping in under the pines and cypresses at night, and dragging a negro here and there from his shanty, letting him sing his wild, hurried prayers for a minute or two, and then stopping it all with buckshot, but carefully skirting the outlaws themselves, some day to fall, like John Taylor, under a "bead" drawn by Henry Berry or one of his brother outlaws. This was not civilization. The irresponsible lex talionis of the hater and hated, the state of things that created in the land of Muscovy between serf and feudal master the phrase that described the murder of the latter by the former as "the wild justice of revenge," existed in the land of the Lowerys with more degrading surroundings than ever before or in any other country. That social, restraining force called government had failed to put an end to it, and there seemed, previous to the HERALD'S exposé, to be a sort of laissez aller agreed on in tacit apathy by all parties.

But even yet the outlaws themselves had not spoken.

THE OUTLAW'S STORY FOR HIMSELF

was unuttered, except through his sentence of death by word of mouth, followed pretty surely by execution through the barrel of a rifle. In perhaps any other state of things no more would be needed previous to setting about his capture. As things stood it seemed that there must be something needing fuller detail—something of moment in their position which neither the shivering sympathizers of their own race nor the vaunting but trembling white foes thereof would or could impart. This was to be got from the outlaw's lips alone. It did not require much deep reasoning to arrive at this conclusion. It forced itself naturally forward, and the journal which had enterprise enough to gather the first part of the story could surely learn the second. Without, then, any feeling of rashness or bravado that I am aware of, but simply in the exercise of a grave duty, to shrink from which would be abhorrent to my nature, of Robeson county. My preparations were simple as my mission was direct, and relying on my ability to make the honorable nature of my purpose apparent even to the desperate men it was my deliberate purpose to meet face to face. Passing over the incidents which do not properly belong to my narrative, I may say that on my arrival in Wilmington I found the Lowerys and the HERALD exposé to be the only topics of interest in that quiet Carolina town, and the tone of the well-dressed, lounging chivalry about the hotels was not at all encouraging. I told the object of my visit to several, and the universal verdict was,

I LEFT FOR THE WOODS AND SWAMPS

"A DANGEROUS GAME, STRANGER, rather you than me." They recalled to me with all the discouraging emphasis which a slow ejaculation of alternate words and tobacco-spittle can command of the fearful fate of Saunders, the detective, and generally finish by saying:—

"'AN' HE WAS SMARTER'N YOU LOOK, STRANGER."

This continual replication of warning did not tend to cheer me. It recalled in a painful way I had never before imagined the poem of Excelsior with its dismal forebodings of a fatal end to my venture, but I dashed these all away in the thought that Longfellow's aimless young madman who died in the snow, had nothing in common with a man endeavoring in his own humble way to serve the civilization which lay so sadly wrecked out in the swamp region beyond. If the scare had reached Wilmington, I reasoned, I shall not then have much difficulty in getting the whites of Robeson county to assist me in ridding them of the objects of their terror through, perhaps,

A MORE MERCIFUL WAY

than killing them off like dogs. But in this I was destined to be mistaken. Excepting Captain Morrison, the "king of conductors" on the Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford Railroad, and Ed Hayes, of Shoe Heel, no one encouraged me to proceed. From the ticket agent, from whom I bought a ticket for Moss Neck, at Wilmington, with his horrified ejaculation—

My God! stranger, you are not going to stop there?"

to the merchants of Shoe Heel, who assured me death would be the sure fate of any stranger who would venture into Scuffletown, I heard but the one opinion, that the Lowerys were devils and would welcome an opportunity to kill a white man. Before leaving Wilmington I prepared

A LETTER, DIRECTED TO H. B. LOWERY, stating that I desired to interview him for the HERALD and offered to give myself into his hands if we would grant me the interview. It was my intention to stop at Moss Neck and attempt to find a messenger who would deliver my letter, but on the train Captain Morrison advised me to go on to Shoe Heel where I would find better accommodations than at Moss Neck, and from where I could certainly send a messenger to the outlaws. I took his advice, but was unable to find any one in or about Shoe Heel who would deliver or who knew any one who would present my petition to the "King" of Robeson county. The reported killing of Boss Strong, it was supposed, had that the time was particularly inauspicious for my visit. I met here James McQueen, or Donahoe, of Richmond county, N. C., who asserted he had killed the notorious Boss. He is a tall, awkward, shambling, dark complexioned man, of Scottish accent, twenty-five years of age; he has very small eyes, which he has a trick of dropping the instant he is looked at. His story will appear hereafter.

The next morning, March 14, I left Shoe Heel and came to Eureka, or Buie's Store, half way between Moss Neck and Red Bank. At the store, close to the railroad, the colored clerk, of whom I enquired the road to Patrick Lowery's, left the store to point it out to me. To him I stated the object of my visit, and asked him to inform any of the outlaws he might see what I was after

THE FATHER OF TWO MURDERERS.

Soon after leaving the store I met an old negro who asked me if I was looking for anybody, when I told him I wanted to go to Pat Lowery's. He told me I was in the right road, and added:—

"I'a skeered of strangers most to def, but you hain't got no gun."

This was Jack Oxendine, the father of Henderson, who was hung in Lumberton in 1870, and Calvin, who is now in the Wilmington jail, charged with being implicated in the King murder. At the conclusion of his introduction he said:—

"'Fore God, dis is a power ul bad country to live in; every now and den de Ku Klock come in yer, and with their shootin' an' whippin' an' hangin', an' de men out by deyselves totin' dere guns, I is scart to def."

A short half mile from the station brought me to

THE HOME OF PAT LOWERY,

the oldest brother of Henry Berry, and a preacher. When I got there he was working in his carpenter shop, near his house—for he is not above honest labor, notwithstanding his profession. I at once unloaded the object of my calling, and asked if I could be permitted to stay with him a few days while I would make efforts to meet the outlaws. He was perfectly willing I should make his house my home while here, but thought my chance of seeing Henry was very slim. It had been reported for the past four weeks that he was dead, and many believed it, even some of his friends, while the majority thought the story had been originated by his wife and brothers to cover his escape from the county. Patrick told me Steve and Tom Lowery

HAD PASSED HIS HOUSE A FEW DAYS BEFORE,

but it might be a long time before they would be in their immediate neighborhood again. After a long conversation between him and James Oxedine, a well-to-do mulatto farmer living near by, it was decided that my best plan would be to go over to the home of old Mrs. Lowery, the mother of Patrick and Henry. They both assured me it would be perfectly safe, for the outlaws never interfered with any but those who troubled them. For a consideration Patrick consented to give me his horse on which to ride over, and his son Allen, a bright boy of sixteen, to guide me. After a dinner of

CORN BREAD, BACON AND COFFEE

we started on our journey, and I must confess to a slight sinking of the heart as I lost sight of the railroad and plunged into the swamps, the lurking places of the Lowery outlaws.

IN THE OUTLAWS' LAND.

I had ridden about a mile, when the discomfort produced by my horse's miserable gait, and the banging of my valise against my legs, became too great, and I proposed to my guide that he should ride awhile. But the change was not for the better, and it had scarcely been made when we came to one of the low places in the road that are so common here, called "branches," and which are feeders to the swamps. Along one side of these branches are laid, or erected in stumps, logs for the convenience of pedestrians. They are generally unhewn, all very narrow, many of them decayed, are very few that stand firm under any movement. At the first of these I came to, after dismounting,

I LOST MY BALANCE,

and got into the water knee deep. I remounted the horse, then, and, excepting the gait and banging aforesaid and crushing of my legs against the trees, first on one side and then on the other, as I followed Allen in the narrow footpath through which he led me, I suffered no great inconvenience.

About two and a half miles from Paisedo we came to the "Back Swamp," where for about three hundred and fifty yards the black water crosses the road, flowing sluggishly through the brush and cypress trees. Along the foot logs here Allen ran, with the confidence inspired by long practice.

ANDREW STRONG'S CABIN.

About a mile from the Back Swamp we passed the cabin of Andrew Strong, one of the outlaws, where his younger brother, Boss, was shot the Friday before. We passed close to the house, and a couple of women came to the door, and stood there as long as the house was in sight. As I have since learned, there was another pair of eyes watching us from a thicket near the house. Andrew Strong himself, with

HIS GUN READY FOR A SHOT,

in his hand, studied me as I passed. Another long stretch of water, mud and sand, and we came to Henry Berry Lowery's house, now in the occupancy of his wife, Rhody. A quarter of a mile further and we reached our destination, the home of OLD MRS. ALLEN LOWERY.

Here we were greeted by the loud and decidedly savage barking of three large dogs. Two or three very light mulatto girls drove them away, and opened the gate for me; as I passed in I was put in the presence of the old woman, who gave me a very hospitable reception, and assured me I was welcome to stay as long as I pleased, if I could put up with their rough fare.

Mrs. Lowery has the largest house in this section of country; it is weather-boarded, has four good sized rooms, and a kitchen attached, and a wide porch in front. It is on a plantation containing about seventy-five acres, and has numerous outbuildings connected with it. There has been no division of the estate or property since old Allen Lowery was killed, the children

GIVING ALL THE PROFITS TO THEIR MOTHER.

One son, Sinclair, living near, superintends the farm, and assists her when necessary. This little plantation produced last year eight bales of cotton and four hundred bushels of corn.

Soon after my arrival I met Sinclair, who is a dark mulatto, with a good countenance. He told me he did not know whether Henry Berry was alive or dead; that no one had seen him for four or five weeks. Mrs. Lowery said the same. Sinclair added:—

"I will be glad if he is dead, for he is a very bad man, and has done a heap of harm."

He further told me he had not been on friendly terms with Henry since the marriage of the latter to Rhody Strong; the marriage it had been announced would be solemnized at his mother's house, and Sinclair, fearing that an attack would be made on the house by the officers in pursuit of Henry, objected to the ceremony being performed there. When Henry was arrested he accused Sinclair of having informed on him, and they had never been on good terms afterwards. Steve and Tom in this quarrel; so that Sinclair could give me no information of the outlaws.

I would here remark that this band are known in their neighborhood by the name "outlaws;" their friends call them and they style themselves outlaws.

When I returned to the house after the conversation with Sinclair, who was working in a field, I was presented to Rhody, the wife of Henry Berry Lowery,

THE "QUEEN OF SCUFFLETOWN."

This young woman is remarkably pretty; her face oval, of a very light color; large, dark, mournful-looking eyes, with long lashes; well shaped mouth; white, small, even teeth; well rounded chin; nose slightly retrousée, with a profusion of straight jet black hair, combine to make her a very pleasant object to gaze at. She has small hands and feet, and on the latter she wears No. 2½, though she could wear No. 2, and still cramp her feet less than the majority of white women. She is of medium height, with a very well developed figure, and is between twenty-one and twenty-two years old. When I add that she has a low, sweet voice, and a great many little graceful motions of her head and body, it will be seen that she is a rara avis in Scuffletown. To the above description I regret that I am compelled to add that this queen cannot write, and that she

SMOKES A PIPE AND RUBS SNUFF.

When Rhody learned the object of my visit she said she would undertake to have my message conveyed to the outlaws, and she had no doubt they would grant me an interview. Henry Berry, she said, was away, and she could not tell when he would return. I walked home with her, and examined carefully the home of the notorious outlaw leader.

THE OUTLAW'S NEST.

The cabin of this man is built precisely as are all those of the poorer mulattoes—one story high, logs from three to eight inches apart, the intersuices not filled in as in log houses at the North, but covered by boards on either the inside or outside, never both. This house had the boards on the outside. There are two doors, opposite each other, secured by modern bolts and buttons, and on the third side is the capacious hearth or fireplace, with chimney built of logs, lined and floored with clay. On the side opposite the fireplace stands the bed, and above and beside it are stretched several poles, upon which hang the clothes of the family.

There are no windows, nor any openings for light but the doors and chimney. Indeed, of some twenty houses of mulattoes I visited, I found but two, those of Mrs. Allen Lowery and Patrick Lowery, in which there were windows.

The house of H. B. Lowery is within a small enclosure, which is surrounded by a larger one, and is on his father Allen's estate. The furniture of this house consists of

A BED, A TABLE, THREE CHAIRS,

and three stools. Over the fireplace are pasted a number of pictures cut from the illustrated papers, while a colored print, labelled "The Two Beauties," hangs over the table. Rhody had left her "help"—a light mulatto, who had been engaged by Andrew Strong to stay with her for six weeks for a pair of shoes and a calico dress—in charge of

HER CHILDREN—

Sally Ann, aged five; Henry Delany, aged three, and Nerlyann, aged one year and two months. They are all of a very bright color, strong, active and healthy, the boy being rather fairer and brighter. He is said to bear a strong resemblance to his father.

I spent an hour or more with Rhody. She told me, further, if I would come back the next morning she might have some information for me, and that in the meantime I might rest assured I would be in no danger from the outlaws or their friends.

AT THE OLD MAN'S GRAVE—OLD MRS. LOWERY'S STORY.

The next morning (March 15) old Mrs. Lowery took me to a small unenclosed grave in a field near her house, where, marked by four rails lying on the ground, was the grave of her husband and son William. The old woman's voice was broken, and the tears rolled down her wasted face even now as she told me how they met their death. There had been no trouble between them and any of their white neighbors, except that some of their sons had fled from the officers who wanted to take them to work in the rebel fortifications at Wilmington. Patrick and Sinclair had gone with the officers, but Henry, Thomas and William had evaded them. Steve was a fireman on the Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford Railroad. The Lowerys had also been accused of assisting soldiers who had escaped from the rebel prison at Florence, S. C., to the federal lines. In 1864 a party of whites, commanded by James Barnes, came to the house and took the old man and William, away, at the same time,

THEY ASKED FOR SPADES,

and took some along with them; some of them returned directly and carried old Mrs. Lowery and her two daughters to the house of a white man, Robert McKenzie, where they were locked up in a smoke house. While they were confined there they heard McKenzie propose that they burn them up in the smoke-house, but this was opposed by others, who said it would make too much talk; then McKenzie said there would be no use in killing the men if the women were allowed to live, because he could not get the plantation if any were left alive. McKenzie then went away saying he was going up to see how the Lowery men were faring. After he had gone, some one outside wondered if they were going to kill the old man and Bill, or only the old man, to which another answered:—

"McKenzie's got to kill both, and get the rest of the boys out of the way before he could get the plantation."

THEY HEARD THE REPORT OF GUNS.

Towards morning, a little after daylight, they were released with the threat,

"If you deny that your family has robbed from us whites it will be mighty bad for you."

When they returned home in a thicket, not far from the house, they found a new-made, shallow grave, in which were the bodies of Allen and William Lowery, lying one above the other, riddled with musket balls.

The next day they came back and took me out into the woods, and said they were going to kill me if I didn't tell them where the Yankee prisoners were hid. I didn't know, and I told them so, but they would'n't believe me. They blindfolded me and tied me to a tree, and said they were going to shoot me. I heard them firing, and then I fainted. When I fainted they untied me and sent the girls to bring me too.

This was old Mrs. Lowery's story, and all the mulattoes whom I met and questioned about it told me about the same thing. That its truthfulness is denied by the whites is no more than is to be expected, though several of them told me they had never heard of Allen Lowery being accused of stealing. He was said to be a consistent member of the Methodist Church, in which he was a class leader. Mrs. Lowery is a member of the same church and

SEEMS TO BE GENUINELY PIOUS.

She has family worship night and morning, in which she leads herself, and always asks a blessing at the table.

From the grave of the Lowery's I went straight to Rhody's house. As I entered the gate of the outer enclosure I noticed a man standing in the doorway who stepped back within the house. As I reached the inner gate he again came to the door and as I saw his equipments. But it was no time to stop now, and in a moment I was in Henry Berry Lowery's house, in the presence of Steve Lowery and Andrew Strong, two of the famous swamp outlaws. With as composed an air as the nature of the case would permit I stepped forward.

"I believe these are the men?" (I am not sure but that I said gentlemen) "I wanted to see," and extended my hand to the one nearest me, who grasped it cordially as Rhody mentioned his name, Andrew Strong, and mine, and then repeated the ceremony with Steve. Both of them offered me chairs; but I accepted that from which Andrew had just arisen, it being nearer the fire, and immediately in seeking them. I told them the great paper of America had given some attention to them, and had published their histories as furnished by the white people of Robeson county; but that the people of the United States might have a clear and just conception of affairs here I had been sent down to see them, hear their stories and the circumstances that had made them outlaws and see how they lived. I told them further that which they could have while I was with them, but which they would oblige me by returning when I left them.

EXPLAINED MY PURPOSE

They replied that Rhody had told them the nature of my business, that they were glad of an opportunity of giving their story to the country, for the "papers were telling so many d——d lies about them," that I would be perfectly safe with them, and that I might keep my pistol.

THE MEN I MET.

Steve Lowery is five feet ten inches high, thickset, with long arms and legs, and is very strong; he has a very dark yellow complexion, hazel eyes, bright and restless, black straight hair and thin mustache and goatee. He was armed with a Spencer rifle, two double-barrelled shot guns, one of the latter and the rifle being slung from his shoulders, and three six-barrelled revolvers in his belt, while two United States cartridge boxes hung from his shoulders.

Andrew Strong is nearly white, about six feet high, with rather mild eyes and reddish beard and hair, the latter cut short. He carried a heavy rifle and the same number of shot-guns, revolvers and cartridge boxes as Steve Lowery, besides a heavy canvas haversack. His impedimenta ("turn," he calls it) weighs not less than a hundred pounds. He and I could barely stagger across the floor with them. After a few general remarks, Andrew told me they would tell me all I wanted to know if I would question them. As the shooting of Boss was the chief topic I had heard discussed after leaving Wilmington, I told them I had seen James McQueen or Donahoe, at Shoe Heel, and had taken down his version of the affair, and would now like to know if it was correct. I read to them McQueen's story as follows:—

DONAHOE'S STORY OF KILLING BOSS STRONG.

"Last Thursday night (May 7), I reached the house of Andrew Strong, on the edge of Scuffletown, about ten miles from here, at twelve o'clock. I fixed a good blind about 150 yards from the house, and lying down I watched the rest of the night and all the next day, eating some provisions I had brought along. About half-past seven P. M. Friday Andrew came out of the woods, and after stopping and looking around him in all directions he went into the house, and directly came out and gave a low call, when Boss came out of the woods to the house; they were each armed with two rifles and two or three revolvers. A little after eight o'clock, when I thought they would be at supper, I slipped up to the house and looked in through the cat hole in the door, as I supposed they were eating their supper by the light on the hearth. Besides Andrew's wife, Flora and a Miss Cummings were there. I kept watching there until Boss laid down on the floor with his feet to the fire and his head towards me and commenced

PLAYING ON A MOUTH ORGAN.

Then I saw my chance, and I pushed the muzzle of my rifle (a Henry) through the cat hole until it was not over three feet from his head, took a steady aim by the light of the fire and shot. When I fired the women screamed and said:—

"'TIS SHOT," "NO HE ISN'T," "YES HE IS,"

and I looked in as quick as I could get my gun out of the way. Boss' arms and legs had fallen straight from his body, and there was a little movement of the shoulders as if he was trying to get up. Andrew Strong was then standing and he stayed there until I left." He said to his wife, "Honey, you go out and see what it is," and opened the door opposite the one I was at and pushed her out. She came out, but did not come around to the side I was; but went in directly and said there was nobody about. He sent her out again, telling her to look in the corners and jams; but before she had got well out he said, "Come back, honey, he was blowing on that thing and it busted and blowed his head off," and directly after he said, "My God he's shot in the head; it must have come from the cat hole," and sent his wife out again, and I slipped off. When I returned the cat hole was shut up and the house was all dark. Then I came back to Shoe Heel and

IN THE SHADOW IN THE CORNER

GOT A FORCE TO GO AFTER THE BODY.

I watched at the cat hole a good half hour after I shot Boss and there was no sign of life after that movement of his shoulders. The next day when we went back we could not find the body nor any blood, but the floor had just been scrubbed and we asked what they had been scrubbing for, and they said they had a dead body in the house all night, but that Steve and Tom Lowery and Andrew Strong had carried it off about an hour before. We searched the house and found a lot of boots, shoes, blankets, wine, brandy and cigars concealed about the house and in the woods. Boss has been

IN THE WOODS SINCE HE WAS FIFTEEN years old. I tell you he was a thousand times worse than Henry Berry Lowery was. He would ravish women, burn houses, abuse children and do everything else that is devilish if it was not for Henry Berry. I am not afraid to stay here now. I would like to have the reward that was offered for Boss, dead or alive. It is now over $6,000, and I think I ought to have it, for I know I killed him, and no person can ever find his body."

THE BANDITS' COMMENTS.

While I was reading they interrupted me frequently with such expressions as—

"Well, that's a d—d lie," "He is nothing but a robber himself," "Let me get a bead on him once," and at the conclusion Andrew said:—

"We can prove that Donohoe is a liar; gal (addressing Rhody's servant), come yer; you was in the house when Boss was shot. Now, which of us got up from supper first?"

"Clorey did," she drawled out.

"Did I hide in the corner?"

"No; you went to pick Boss up."

"Dar, now, he's proved to be a damned liar; and he didn't stay about dere no half hour. Why, I'll take you out dere to-morrow an' show you de tracks he made when he done run away. 'Pears if he

JUMPED SIX YARDS EBRY TIME.

I jumped for my gun an run out soon as de shot was fired, an heerd him gwine fru de bushes powerful. I'll 'save' him yet. Why, his back is full of shot holes now dat he done got up in Richmond county for stealing chickens. He had to go away from dere. He is a low, no-account nigger. He ain't no white man. He call hisself McQueen. I'd like to know what right he has to call hisself McQueen when his mother's name was Donahoe, and she and his mother was a mulatto same as me is. If dey was anybody dey wouldn't marry niggers, would dey? His two sisters is bof married to niggers in Richmond county. By God! I'll lay for him. He didn't kill Boss neither, but he hurt him powerful bad. He hit him in the neck, but he ain't dead yet. Now, Rhody, you was dere de nex' day when day come after Boss. You tell dis gentleman about it.

WAR'NT NEVER MARRIED TO MCQUEEN,

RHODY LOWERY'S STORY.

"Glory come over in de morning an' tole me Boss was shot, an' when I went dere Andy an' Steve was juss gwine to tote him away; he wa'n't dead, nohow. Den we done scrub de flo'; peoples kin scrub they's flo's if dey want to, I reckon. Den when Donahoe's party come up dey stopped 200 yards from de house an axed if dere was any men about, an den dey come up. None of we didn't tell they Boss was killed; we juss said dey had toted him away. Den dey searched de house, but all dey found was a pair of boots and shoes and a bottle of peach brandy dat Andy had bought at Floyd Oxendine's sto' dat day, as you kin prove if you ax him."

"YOU PUT DAT ALL IN DE PAPER, MISTER, and den put in dat we is gwine to kill Donahoe sure; we'll find him an' we wont shoot him through a cat hole, neither," said Andrew, to which Steve, who had been perfectly silent before, added,

"Yes, God damn him, his life is gwine to be powerful short."

"WHERE IS HENRY BERRY LOWERY?

It is reported at Shoe Heel that he is dead, and most of the people seem to believe it. Mr. Hayes, though, told me he had seen him last Wednesday night, about ten o'clock, near Oxendine's store."

"Well, sir," answered Steve, "he ain't dead, but he's went away; he went nigh onto four weeks ago, and he 'spected to be back in five or six weeks. But he ain't dead, nohow."

"Have you any objections to telling me what he went away for, if he expected to return?"

"Well, he didn't tell nobody his business, I reckon; he'll be back some of dese days; you put in de paper dat Henry Berry Lowery ain't dead."

SPENDS THE DAY WITH THE OUTLAWS.

I spent the day with these men until four o'clock. About noon Steve, Andrew, Rhody and I sat down to a dinner of fried eggs, bacon, corn bread and coffee. Andrew, for Rhody, apologized for the dinner, saying if she had known I would be there she would have "done killed a chicken." Steve, who was very taciturn for an hour or more after I met them, gradually became more loquacious, and has ever since been the most communicative, most friendly and

MOST JOLLY OF THE PARTY.

After dinner Steve asked to see my pistol; he examined it and pronounced it rusty, whereupon Andrew took it apart, oiled it and returned it to me. Steve wanted to buy a plated gold ring I wore, but upon telling him it had been presented to me, he said I should keep it, but he would like to have a gold ring and asked me the prices of them.

They gave me much information as to their way of living, the hunting parties that had been in search of them, and their successful and often narrow escapes from their pursuers and from jail, which I will make the subject of future letters.

THE OUTLAWS HOLD A COUNCIL.

Before they left they went out of the house and held an animated conversation of perhaps half an hour's duration in the garden, after which Steve addressed me:—

"We've trusted three men before and ebery one of dem betrayed us, an' we swo' we'd neber trust no stranger agin, but you look honest, an your story 'pears to be all right, an' we is gwine to trust you some. Now you's got about Donahoe's shootin Boss, we are gwine to keep you heah till you can

PUT IN DE PAPER HOW WE KILLED DONAHOE.

We won't hurt you, an' you kin travel about whar you hab a mind to in dis place, but you must sweah an oath dat you won't try to go away without us lettin' you. We'll treat you well an' show you whar Saunders was captured an' killed an' whar Make Sanderson an' Taylor an' all de rest of dem was killed, and tell you all about dem. But you has got to stay heah a week, and we is gwine to send a telegraph to de paper for a joke dat we hab got you, so dey will see the outlaws ain't all dead yet.

YOU CAN'T GET AWAY, NOHOW, without our knowing it, and den it might be powerful bad for you."

I was somewhat dismayed at this speech, but expressed myself satisfied with the arrangement. I saw I would have an opportunity of seeing what the not often enjoyed by Northern men, and felt that I was in no great danger if I acted honestly towards my captors.

FAST TO MEET AGAIN.

The outlaws then slung on their equipments, and after promising to meet me at the "New Bridge," three miles distant, the next morning, strode into the heavy pine forest, and I went back into the cabin, where Rhody taught me how to rub snuff.

SECOND LETTER FROM OUR CAPTURED CORRESPONDENT.

SCUFFLETOWN, March 23, 1872.

THE DEATH OF HENRY BERRY LOWERY.

As this letter cannot be read by the people of this settlement before I have left it, the most important piece of information I have to communicate shall be given first. Henry Berry Lowery, the notable chief of the notorious swamp outlaws is actually dead. This is denied by all of his comrades, and his relatives profess to be ignorant of his fate. But from evidence the most reliable, when connected with a well-connected chain of circumstances, I am enabled to give you a correct account of

THE DEATH OF THIS ROBBER CHIEF.

Between February 15 and 16, in company with his fifteen Arabians, Boss Strong, Henry Berry Lowery was ranging the country in the neighborhood of Moss Neck in search of some persons whom he had been informed were hunting him, while Steve and Tom Lowery and Andrew Strong were stationed at a rendezvous on Lumber River, near the "new bridge." About one and three-quarter miles from Moss Neck station, within short gunshot of the road leading from Lama's Bridge to Mitchell's mill, they discovered in the bushes a newly made "blind" a place of concealment or ambush made by interweaving the branches of the thickly grown bushes. It was not then occupied, and Henry Berry, believing it had been recently made by one of his pursuers, who would shortly return to it, ensconced himself in it, while Boss made a blind for himself a short distance off, covering the road. But a few minutes after they had placed themselves in their respective positions the report of a gun was heard from Henry's hiding place, and when Boss, who waited to hear a word from his chief or an answering shot from an enemy, cautiously approached the spot Henry Berry Lowery lay on his back, with one barrel of his shotgun discharged and his nose, forehead and the WHOLE FRONT OF HIS HEAD BLOWN OFF.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

The broken ramrod and the missing wiper showed he had been trying to draw a load from his gun. Boss drew the body into a thicket, and notified his companions, who straightway buried him where, in all human probability, the eye of man will see him never.

Thus perished this remarkable man, and his death marks the dissolution of this most formidable body of desperadoes. The large sum of money he was said to be in possession of is also lost to the country, for no member of the band, not even Boss nor his wife, knew the whereabouts of his treasure chest. The remaining outlaws have made diligent search, but as yet have had their labor for their pains. Henry Berry was said to have had a good deal of money, besides his share of the proceeds of the Lumberton Bank, from which some thirty thousand dollars were taken. It appears to have been his habit of appropriating to his own use taken, giving his subjects the other booty.

But to resume the story of my life among the outlaws. A little after dark on the evening of the day I met Andrew Strong and Steve Lowery I returned to Henry Berry's house, in pursuance of his wife's invitation, to spend the night there. The dogs (of which she now has two, having sent the third to Andrew Strong's house since the shooting of Boss) giving warning of my approach, she appeared at the door, and, having driven her guardians away, welcomed me with,

"I WAS THINKIN' YOU WAS SKEERED TO COME."

She had prepared a supper of stewed chicken for me, for which, however, I had no appetite. It was not seasoned with either salt or pepper. Indeed, in none of the houses of the mulattoes here have I found any pepper, and nothing appears to be salted but the bacon, from which enough could be spared to bountifully supply all the other viands. The corn bread, the standing dish at every meal in every house, served up hot, was, to my notion, a most horrible compound—watery, doughey and tasteless. Their "wheat bread," which has always been provided for me when my entertainers discovered I could not swallow the corn bread, is simply baked unleavened flour and water.

CORN BREAD AND CHEESE.

Next to corn bread, the great sustainer of life in Scuffletown is cheese, of which all eat enormously, cutting off of a half or quarter standing on the table pieces as large as one's fist, and carving it into devourable portions on their plates. The youngest scion of the house of Lowery (Henry Berry branch), one year and two months old, has constantly an immense piece in his hands, which he nibbles at continually, or whenever he was not taking his proper mammarial nourishment. Coffee can be had at every house, but at Steve Lowery's alone have I found sugar. A very black, thin molasses, and sometimes honey, is used to sweeten it. The use of milk in coffee appears to be unknown.

After supper Rhody showed me

THE HOLES MADE BY THE BULLETS

that had entered the house in the many fruitless attacks upon her husband. There were six or seven of them, most of them about the door opposite the woods. A coffee mill with a bullet hole through its sides stood where it had received the shot; and the nail on which had hung a small looking-glass that was shivered by a rifle ball was shown me. These observations, with incidents of the "war" r. the volubly related by the Queen of the region, occupied about an hour, at the end of which I expressed a desire to retire, asking, with some misgivings, where she proposed locating me. She said while she would make a couch for herself, help and family on the floor.

I SHOULD SLEEP IN THE BED,

Except the occasional crying of 'the child,' as they always call their babies, the frequent barking of the dogs, the cry of the owls and the placing of additional coverings on my bed once in the night, nothing disturbed my slumbers, and I slept as securely in my feather bed in this log cabin of the greatest outlaw of the nineteenth century as in the enlightened North.

The next morning, after a breakfast on the same chicken we had tried the night before, with a guide furnished by the friends of the outlaws, I started on horseback for the New Bridge. On the way I passed the "Devil's Den," a desolate wild spot in the Back Swamp, where is said to be one of the hiding places of the bandits. An account of a visit I afterwards made to this den with Steve Lowery will appear hereafter. Near the New Bridge we came upon Andrew and Steve lying beside an immense fire in the road.

A SCUFFLETOWN AL FRESCO.

A more picturesque scene can scarcely be imagined; on the left a dark, thickly shrubbed swamp, long festoons of moss hanging from and binding together the gums and cypresses; on the right a heavy growth of pitch pines, with the bark removed from their butts; in front the deep (and here wide) channel of the Lumber River, with the remains of what has once been a bridge, and in the foreground by a blazing fire two of the robbers of the swamps reclining on the ground with their six guns and other equipments of war lying by them.

After both had shaken hands with me and proffered me a drink of whiskey, they started my guide homeward, and prepared to cross the stream. Long ago, when this bridge was built, it was known as the "New Bridge," and still retains the name, though there is but slight vestige of any bridge left. Upon Andrew's remarking it would be a pity to make me wade the stream when I was not used to it, Steve proposed that if Andrew would "tote" the guns over he would

HE WOULD "TOTE" ME,

to which Andrew gave a ready assent. He shouldering the guns, I got upon a log and then upon Steve's back, with my arms about his neck, and he carried me through the water about eighty yards, at times being up to his knees, and landed me dry on the other side, where Andrew followed us directly with the guns. Steve said I was not as heavy as his "turn," and as I weigh but 115 pounds I guess he told the truth. Here Andrew asked me to carry one of his guns, and, as I was not in a situation to decline, gave me his lightest shot gun. He told me I must keep up with them, 'for with this gun in my hands I would not be permitted to fall behind them. Our destination was Moss Neck, where I wanted to mail some letters and send some private despatches to the telegraph office at Wilmington, and they wanted to SEND THEIR MESSAGE TO THE HERALD.

We heard the train east coming when we were about a mile from the station, and ran the whole distance from there. They would not go up to the train, nor would they let me go until I promised them solemnly, with my hand on my heart, that I would not go off in it, and would hand their despatch, as well as my own, to the conductor.

From Moss Neck, with a young man who had been taken prisoner by the outlaws, when they captured the detective Saunders, but who now appeared to be on very good terms with them, we went down the railroad about a mile and then half a mile South into a "bay," where Saunders' "camp" had been located.

THE SCENE OF SAUNDERS' MURDER.

Steve leading and Andrew in the rear from the railroad, we wound about the most crooked, curious path that can be imagined, until we came to a spot where the [illegible] were more [illegible] ing the ground than elsewhere. "[illegible]" said Steve, "was my [illegible] when we were lying for Saunders; that thicket was [illegible] and fifty yards nearer the camp [illegible] is where I [illegible] when Saunders came [illegible] A hundred yards [illegible] and we reached the camp and

A LONELY [illegible] LOOKING [illegible]

It was [illegible] twenty feet square, [illegible] by four corner posts, covered [illegible] some dozen of empty barrels and some parts of machinery used in the distillation of whiskey. Besides these and a pair of old shoes and a paddle for stirring up "mash" there was nothing left. And here, sitting about on the barrels, Steve told me the history of John Saunders, the detective, and his end:—

STEVE LOWERY'S STORY OF THE DEED.

"About the middle of 1869 Saunders came down here to teach school; he boarded around among the colored people and always said he was a republican. For several months after he came he made no effort to make our acquaintance, though he often met us in the roads and would bid us the time of day very pleasantly, and he would tell the colored people about here that we outlaws had been driven to the swamps against our will. After he had been here about four or five months he said he had authority to organize Masonic lodges, and he told us all about Masonry. We had heard before there was such a society, whose members but we did not know anything about it, scarcely. He told us (I mean the colored men who were not outlaws, for he didn't know us yet, except to speak to us) the Masons had started over a thousand years ago, and that from that time until this only one man ever broke his oath and refused to help another Mason, and that that man had been killed. He started a lodge, and charged two or three dollars to get in, and two dollars besides for a chart that had all the figures on it used in Masonry. A heap of our people joined it, and they would come and tell us outlaws what a good thing it would be for us. They said if we were Masons, and any other Mason would come to hunt us, or if we were arrested and the jury or the judge were Masons, all we had to do to get clear was to give them a sign, and they wouldn't trouble us any more.

STOOD BY EACH OTHER THROUGH THICK AND THIN,

SAUNDERS HAD A MIGHTY SLICK TONGUE, and could talk like a preacher. When the colored people told us so much about him and the Masons we went to see him, and after that we were mighty thick with him until the fall of 1870. None of us joined the Masons, but we believed what he said, and that he was the best friend we had. He finally offered to get us out of this country down South, if we would pay him for it, and trust him, and we had made some of our arrangements to leave when we found him out.

"In the meantime, early in the spring, he found the white people more powerfully down on him, and to save his life from them he had to tell what he was after, and to join the Ku Klux. That summer we often knew of his being with some of the people we thought were Ku Klux, but he told us they were accusing him of making Masons of us, and he professed to be very much afraid of them.

"Finally we heard through some friends that we had among the white men that Saunders was one of the leaders of the Ku Klux, and we set ourselves to watch him sharp, and finally we found, proven beyond all doubt, that he was the commander of a party of Ku Klux, who, with sheepskins on their faces,

DRAGGED AT MIDNIGHT FROM THEIR BEDS

Sim Oxendine, Bart McClain, Jim Dial and Silas Deane, and shot Floyd Oxendine, taking them all to Moss Neck, and whipping some and tying others up by the thumbs. The next day Saunders was driven to John Taylor's house in Taylor's wagon, and hid away from us, for somebody told him we had found him out.

"In November (I think 1870) we found that Saunders was living in this place. Call this a camp? Why, it is a whiskey still! You say that the Lowerys are helping the United States government in for that was what we did here. They had everything ready to begin work again on Monday morning. They had been making corn whiskey here on this spot for months. The meal for it was ground at William McNeill's mill, where Archie McNeil worked, and the still was John Taylor's. The papers call this Saunders' camp; you see it is a whiskey camp.

"Well, one Sunday soon after I found this place, we outlaws, and a heap of men that had been hunted by the Ku Klux, came here after Saunders. We got here a little bit before night and there were only three men here, all named Smith, sons of the man who owns the land. We stationed our guards about the camp, a good many of them in that blind I showed you 150 yards back, and others all through the woods, so that we would not be surprised. About half an hour after we were stationed we who came to the still to get on a little spree, and after that we saw nobody until nearly morning. I was stationed about a hundred yards from the camp and fifty from the other boys. Our prisoners were under guard at the still.

"About daylight I heard some one coming, and directly up walked Saunders, his head hanging down, and his gun, a double-barrelled shot gun, slung under his left arm. I slipped out from my blind and said, 'Halt;' he said, 'Lowerys! Lowerys! nothing,' and made a motion with his right hand towards his gun. Said I, 'God damn you, none of that; and I went up to him with both hammers of my gun cocked, took off his gun, unbuckled his belt of pistols, and took him to the camp, where the rest of the outlaws joined us, and released our other prisoners.

"Here we searched Saunders, and found on him a paper issued by the Ku Klux, containing the names of forty-eight colored men who were to be killed; among them were Sinclair and Patrick Lowery, my brothers, and James Oxendine, as good and peaceable a man as there is in North Carolina. The paper was signed by Saunders, his full name, John C. Saunders, and Sandy McIntyre, with John Taylor, witness. I wish I had that paper yet to show you; but when I killed Saunders I buried it, and it is rotted long ago, I reckon.

"Well, we took him away from there over to near where his body was found, after Henderson Oxendine's confession, and kept him until Thursday. You NEVER SAW ANYBODY BEG FOR HIS LIFE AS HE DID.

He offered, if we would let him go, to join us and kill anybody we told him to. He said we might bring any other prisoner there and he would kill him for us if we only would let him live, and he confessed to having joined the Ku Klux and told us who the rest of them were. He did beg powerfully for life, but we couldn't let him go, and the only privilege we gave him was to allow him to write a letter to his wife, which we mailed for him afterward. We asked him why some of the Masons didn't come to save him, and he admitted he had no right to make Masons. At last on Thursday we drew lots to see which of us should finish him, and it fell to me. So I bound up his eyes and tied him with his back to a tree and gave him an hour in which to pray; but I reckon he found the time too long, for he said,

'FOR GOD'S SAKE, STEVE, PUT ME OUT OF THIS SUSPENSE,' and I emptied both barrels of buckshot into his heart, and afterward Andrew Strong buried him."

At the end of this horrible story Andrew spoke up: "Steve, was I here that night you captured him?" to which Steve answered, "No;" and the same question to the young man with me, who had been one of those captured that Sunday night, received the same answer.

"All I had to do with it," said Andrew, "was that I buried him. People won't find fault with a man for burying another when he is dead, will they? I declare to God that was all I had to do with the Saunders affair," which Steve confirmed in strong language.

From this desolate spot we returned to Moss Neck, where another of the outlaws, and upon whose head is set a price of $5,000. Tom Lowery is five feet ten inches high, strongly built, with a lighter complexion than Steve, but darker than Henry Berry. He has rather regular features, a high forehead and the brightest eyes of the three outlaws I met. He has a short, black beard, and straight black hair, and is more refined in his appearance than Steve or Andrew Strong. He was armed precisely as they, with a rifle and two shotguns and a belt full of revolvers. He said he had heard of my presence in the neighborhood and was glad to see me.

It being now about one o'clock we were all [illegible], so Steve bought a couple dozen of eggs from a woman near by, who boiled them for him, and we went into the store at Moss Neck to eat them, which work we accomplished by cutting them in halves with our knives, sprinkling coarse salt on them and gulping down each half from its shell. I ate four, the remainder being devoured by the three outlaws. In addition to the eggs we had some

GINGER CAKE, CHEESE AND WRETCHED WHISKEY.

After dinner I was taken to McNeill's mill, near Moss Neck, the place where that Make (Malcolm) Sanderson was killed, and where, within a few yards of the former, one of his murderers, John Taylor, was subsequently punished. The place was pointed out to me, and the story of their respective deaths told by Andrew Strong.

WHERE MAKE SANDERSON AND JOHN TAYLOR WERE KILLED.

In September, 1870, Andrew, who up to that time had been charged with no offence, and was then working at his home, was called up from his bed at about eleven in the night by a party of over twenty men, who said they wanted him to go along with them a little ways. When he had dressed and gone out to the party he found they had another man (Make Sanderson) with them. After they had gone about a mile one of the party, McNeil, turned to Andrew and said, "You'll never see morning again," and upon his prisoner asking why and what he had done was answered that he was a d——d nigger and a spy for the Lowerys and so was Sanderson, and they had determined to kill them all. On the road to Moss Neck they were met by John Taylor, to whom the prisoners made a strong and passionate appeal for mercy, to which he replied, "If all the mulatto blood in the country was in you two and a movement of my foot would send you to hell I would make it." Soon after the prisoners were tied together and led to a secluded spot about a mile from Moss Neck, where they were to die. Sanderson asked for time to pray, which, after some consultation, was given him. In the midst of his supplications for pardon he was interrupted by a blow from a pistol and told to hurry up and not to pray so loud, as

GOD WOULD HEAR HIM ANYHOW.

When he had finished they were taken to a proper distance from their captors to be shot at, when Andrew, who had been working at his bonds ever since they were put on him, broke them suddenly and rushed for the woods, followed by the shots of his enemies. Make Sanderson's body was found the next morning near McNeil's millpond riddled with bullets. It was said he was standing on a plank over the race, and at the first fire fell into the water still alive, and crawling out on the land below was shot on the ground where his mangled body was found.

For this murder John Taylor was arrested, but held to bail in the sum of $500. When H. B. Lowery heard this he remarked:—"We mulattoes must carry out our own laws: I will kill John Taylor," and on the morning of January 14, 1871, with a company of soldiers within 200 yards of him, he and Boss Strong rose from the road, a hundred yards from where Sanderson had been killed the fall before, and at a distance of less than ten yards shot the top of his head off.

AN OUTLAW CONCERT.

After Andrew had told me this history and had shown me where Sanderson and Taylor were killed, and where Henry Berry and Boss were ambushed, we returned to the store, where for a couple of hours in a back room Steve and Andrew "picked" the banjo, played on the violin and sang negro melodies to an appreciative and enthusiastic audience. Steve sings very well, and the peculiar airs with which he was accompanied on the banjo were novel and exceedingly pleasant.

A LODGING PAID FOR.

When we finally left Moss Neck it was for the purpose of finding a place for me to spend the night. About three miles up the railroad we came to the residence of Tom Chavis, a well-to-do mulatto, where Steve engaged lodgings for me, telling them to give me a good supper and allow me to retire to bed immediately after, for I was "clean done worried out," and he would pay the bill; and, fixing a point to meet me the next day, the outlaws strode away toward the swamps.

PRIVATE LETTERS AND DESPATCHES.

A Peep Into the Inner Life of Journalism—Struggles to Achieve a Great End.

The inner life of a great daily journal is seldom revealed to a public anxious alone for results. In this instance, that a full appreciation may be gained of the difficulties and dangers which the correspondents of the HERALD meet with daily in the performance of their duties, we lay before our readers a string of letters and despatches which, read between the lines of the letters just preceding, will evince the devotion and determination necessary to achieve a success in journalism. The worker on a great paper consents to a complete merging of his personality in its columns, content with the knowledge of having performed a service to civilization untrumpeted, and looking for personal recognition only to the paper that commands his services. The documents will explain themselves, and will not be the least interesting in the pages of this "strange, eventful history."

DIFFICULTIES IN WILMINGTON.

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 20, 1872.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In reply to my letter sent Henderson by special messenger I have received his correspondence, together with his personal note, which I enclose. My difficulties here are very great, and I am compelled to be on the qui vive always and to consult all possible expedients of information. The train from Robeson county arrives late in the afternoon, and it is necessarily late at night before I can obtain data from passengers, conductor, &c., upon which to predicate my despatches.

I have informed Henderson, in order to keep his spirits up to the necessary point, that if he shall need money urgently I will let him have some upon the HERALD's account. Very respectfully,

E. CUTHBERT.

THE CAPTURED CORRESPONDENT'S NOTE.

SCUFFLETOWN, ROBESON CO., N. C., March 19, 1872.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I have been among the outlaws of this county for five days and propose remaining several days longer. They appear to place perfect confidence in me, and are pleased with the opportunity given them of getting their histories before the people. They have taken me through the swamps, shown me how they lived, carried me across the streams on their shoulders and promise to take me blindfolded to one of their secret hiding places. I enclose my first instalment of information. If you are satisfied with it, and the composition is satisfactory, you will not hesitate to advance me enough money to enable me to reach New York. A Baltimore or before reaching Washington, on my way here, I lost my pocketbook—whether stolen or not have no idea—as I discovered at Washington. Knowing no one there to whom I cared to apply I pawned my watch for $50 and came on. Now I have enough of that left to pay my expenses back as far as Washington, and I would be obliged to you if you would send me $75 or $100 to Washington immediately on the receipt of this. In about three days I will send you my second letter, and if you will send the money as requested to Washington I will be in New York on Wednesday (27) when we can make any further arrangements that may be necessary. If you care for any more references as to character than I gave you before, Rev. Mr. Shealen, of Rahway, N. J., lives near you, and you may apply to him for information.

The fact is I cannot possibly get further than Washington without some money. Please direct to me, care of Senator John Scott. He has not seen me since I was a boy, but he will know me.

Give, if you please, my full name, which I write as your obedient servant,

A. BOYD HENDERSON.

THE FIRST LETTER—FEARS FOR HIS FATE.

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 22, 1872.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Enclosed is Henderson's correspondence received by this evening's mail. I have no information regarding Henderson not already communicated to you by telegraph. If he should fail to effect his escape on Monday I shall certainly feel very serious apprehensions as to his fate. Very respectfully,

E. CUTHBERT.

THE DANGER THICKENING—[illegible] AS A SPY.

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 22, 1872.

[Private despatch to the New York Herald.]

Note from Henderson states he is in great danger. He has been searched and his revolver taken from him by the outlaws, who now regard him as a spy and fear that he may chloroform them. He sends information not to be published, as it might cost him his life, that both Boss Strong and Henry Berry Lowery are dead. If not killed sooner, he expects to escape Monday. Will start report in about two hours.

E. CUTHBERT.

ESCAPED!—ESCAPED!—PUBLISH ALL.

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 25, 1872.

[Private despatch to the New York Herald.]

Henderson has arrived safe; he starts for New York this evening. Publish at once deaths of Henry Berry Lowery and Boss Strong, as I reported. Will start despatches in about two hours.

E. CUTHBERT.

COMMENTS BY THE CHIVALRY.

How the Southern Press Regard the Lowery Outlaws and Herald Enterprise—Everybody in General and Nobody in Particular to Blame.

If anything were wanting to show the hopeless state of ignorance of their own country which prevails in certain portions of the South it will be found mirrored in the following "elegant extracts" from some of their journals. It would be impossible to classify their stupidities and blind bloodthirstiness which always manages to strike the wrong man and blame a simple effect to the wrong cause, probably the lost one. We commence with a well informed (?) journal in the Palmetto State, which in turn quotes from another equally well-posted in the same State. The casual observer will be charmed to observe that it is President Grant who is to blame all through. The first paper has for its motto, "To thine own self be true and it must follow as the night the day thou canst not then be false to any man." Let us see how this glorious selfishness justifies itself:—

GRANT, NOT ROBESON COWARDICE, TO BLAME.

[From the Keowee Courier, Walhalla, S. C., March 22.]

LOWERY, THE OUTLAW, NOT DEAD.—Henry Berry Lowery, the notorious North Carolina outlaw, is not dead, as reported a few days since. It is indeed a matter of wonder that this bandit and his gang of marauders have been allowed to carry on their depredations in as populous a section of country as Robeson county, North Carolina, for so many years. The Edgefield Advertiser says upon this subject:—"Henry Berry Lowery, as most people know, is the infamous and audacious negro outlaw of Robeson county, North Carolina. For three years past the murders, robberies, plundering and dark crimes of all kinds of Lowery and his gang have been a subject of wonder and of horror to the country at large. Compared to the bloody ferocity and insane brutality of Lowery and his gang the alleged Ku Klux doings in our own State have been deeds of gentleness and mercy. Lowery is a 'loyal' man and plays into the hands of the radical party. His victims, therefore, have been the respectable white people of North Carolina. It has been reported for a week past that this brutal negro outlaw had been killed by his own brother, but, unfortunately, the report turns out to be untrue and Lowery still lives to murder and plunder. And while he thus murders and plunders in Robeson county the citizens of Sampson, the adjoining county, are being arrested right and left, branded as Ku Klux for refusing to become partisans of Grant. The hypocrisy of the Grant government in its treatment of the South is more apparent in Sampson county, North Carolina, than even in Union county, South Carolina, where a reign of terror now prevails. Federal soldiers torment and disorganize this good and peaceable county, arrest its prominent citizens without cause, and throw women and children into a state of profound consternation, while Henry Berry Lowery and his bloodthirsty gang go at large in Robeson county, murdering and robbing with impunity. And the best government the world ever saw! looks on complacently and thinks it is all right because it is unreconstructed rebels who are thus killed and outraged. As regards Lowery himself, we deeply regret to learn that he still lives."

Georgia shares our wonder that the old North State cannot crush three desperadoes. It is indebted to the Wilmington Journal for its news (?) on the point; but its brutal recommendation—to imprison the HERALD correspondent—is all its own.

SAVE US FROM INTELLIGENCE.

[From the Savannah (Ga.) Daily Republican, March 22.]

THE NORTH CAROLINA SWAMP ANGELS.—The Wilmington Journal of Wednesday has the following:—

Stephen Lowery and Andrew Strong were at Moss Neck yesterday as the train on the Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford Railroad passed that point. Neither Tom Lowery nor Henderson, the HERALD correspondent, were there, nor could anything be learned of their movements.

How these members of the Lowery gang, for whom large rewards have been offered, can appear in public and stroll around railroad stations at pleasure, without somebody capturing the rascals, puzzles our comprehension. It would be well to put the Lowerys and Henderson in the same jail.

They are not all as brutal as our Georgian friend. The paper below named combats the idea of McDiarmid, the saintly editor of the Robesonian, for which oasis in the red desert we are thankful. It is very odd, however, that the Wilmington daily should never think of finding out for itself what is doing only sixty miles away.

THE HERALD CORRESPONDENT SHOULD BE LET ALONE.

[From the Wilmington (N. C.) Daily Journal, March 22.

THE OUTLAWS.—There is nothing of any particular importance from the seat of war in Robeson county. The Robesonian of yesterday's date mentions repeated assertions of the death of Henry Berry Lowery. It is said that he was killed by his brother, Tom Lowery, and that some of the brains of the outlaw leader may be seen spattered on the wall of a crib on Tom Lowery's premises.

The Robesonian also states that Mr. Henderson, the NEW YORK HERALD reporter, now with the gang, has been outlawed by a Board of Magistrates, and that a posse is now in pursuit of him; but we are glad to notice in another article, and for which the press was stopped, that the report of the outlawry is untrue. We would regret exceedingly to know that any such step had been taken, as no good could possibly result therefrom. Mr. Henderson is, undoubtedly, a recognized newspaper correspondent, and is merely seeking material for his paper, and whether his report should be true or not true as regards the people of Robeson county it might be hard to establish a complicity on his part with the gang of outlaws.

OUR CORRESPONDENT SEEN AT MOSS NECK.

[From the same journal, March 23.]

Mr. A. B. Henderson, the HERALD correspondent, appeared yesterday at Moss Neck as the train passed that point. He was apparently alone, although he stated that the outlaws were near at hand, and had forbade him to leave them yet. He spoke as though he was now really in fear of them, they having searched him and taken his pistol from him immediately on his return to them from Lumberton. They appear to entertain suspicions in regard to his business among them, and seemed to fear particularly that he might attempt to stupefy them with chloroform should he entertain any idea of effecting their capture. He stated that he had promised to go with them once more to visit some of their old haunts that he had not yet seen, when they are to release him and he will return again to civilized life.

That they have given up all serious idea of capturing the outlaws will be seen from the following. The Star evidently thinks it more profitable to detail the movements of our correspondents. See how we generously help them to news:—

A FEATHER IN HIS CAP.

[From the Wilmington Star, March 22.]

No news of importance from the "seat of war." When the train passed Moss Neck yesterday Andrew Strong and Stephen Lowery were still there, but Henderson had gone off somewhere in company with Tom Lowery. Nothing as yet as to the whereabouts of Henry Berry. We learn that the HERALD correspondent, Henderson, had the distinguished honor of riding home from church with Henry Berry's wife on Sunday last, which will be quite a "feather in his cap" when he returns to his home, and will be a very respectable item in his forthcoming history of events among the "Swamp Angels."

The subjoined clipping will give a fair idea of how the news which the HERALD correspondents go on the ground to gather is picked up in fragments down there:—

REPORTS, RUMORS, HINTS, INNUENDOES.

[From the same paper.]

Nothing further, confirmatory or otherwise, in regard to the reported killing of Boss Strong has as yet been received, though it is still the impression among a great many on the line of the road that he was certainly killed. There is a rumor to the effect that Henry Berry Lowery has left the county, he having previously disguised himself with false whiskers, &c., so that his most intimate friends and acquaintances would not know him. It is also reported that Stephen Lowery, who has the reputation of being really the most brutal and bloodthirsty of the gang, is now in command in place of his brother Henry Berry. We give these rumors for what they are worth, in no wise vouching for their correctness. If there should be any truth in them the fact would account for other members of the gang being seen with Henry Berry's favorite weapons in their possession, as is reported to be the case. Then, too, if Boss Strong has in reality been sent to the happy hunting grounds of his fathers the number of this notorious gang of desperadoes will have been reduced to three, viz.—Stephen Lowery, Tom Lowery and Andrew Strong. George Applewhite, reported to have been killed some time during the early part of last year, but who subsequently [illegible] among the gang, afterwards disappeared again, and his whereabouts or probable fate [illegible] been [illegible] in mystery. [illegible] as Henry Berry is now reported to have done, while others entertain the opinion that he was [illegible] in some brawl among the members of the gang.

Again we drop on a refreshing [illegible] the Chivalric bloodthirsty [illegible], the paper from which we take the following spirits, for its motto the phrase "Free and unshackled," which is a capital one for all such uncaged, ranting lunatics. Floundering round from error to misstatement, the wolfish editor applauds what never happened:—

AN UNENVIABLE NOTORIETY.

[From the Roanoke News, Weldon, N. C., March 23.]

THE LOWERYS AND HERALD CORRESPONDENT.

The following, which we clip from the Norfolk Journal, will be a source of congratulation on the part of those who can do no less than feel sensibly the injustice of the slander perpetrated by the HERALD on the good people of North Carolina. Henderson has attempted an unenviable notoriety by putting himself with these desperadoes, and from all appearances would make the impression that the members of this gang are unjustly persecuted, and that the whole people of North Carolina are but little more advanced in civilization than the forest Indians. We can only hope this consummate fool and interloper may be severely dealt with:—

WILMINGTON, March 21, 1872.

The reports from the Lowery outlaws are very conflicting in character. Boss Strong has not been seen since reported killed, and Henry Berry Lowery has been missing several weeks. A. B. Henderson, the correspondent of the NEW YORK HERALD who has been with the outlaws several days with the alleged object of interviewing them for that paper, is said to have been outlawed by a board of magistrates of Robeson county and his arrest ordered. It is not supposed he will be detained by the authorities of that county.

Ah! we knew we would find it. The Weekee Courier and the Edgefield Advertiser laid all the blame on Grant. It is now the turn of the radical. He says the shame rests on the Ku Klux Legislature. Is this really so? and has his ragged, chicken-stealing highness of the invincible empire really got a Legislature of his own? We think not. How these partisans rave! Say it is Grant, Ku Klux, black, white or mulatto, but let the terrible outlaws alone is the horror cry all round.

THE KU KLUX LEGISLATURE.

[From the Carolina Era, Raleigh, N. C., March 23—tri-weekly.]

THE LOWERY GANG.

The Ku Klux sheets have been rampant and brandishing their tomahawks at the Governor of North Carolina, charging him with the responsibility of all the robberies and murders perpetrated by the Robeson county outlaws; they proclaim him guilty of neglect of duty for not making strenuous efforts to destroy these bandits and cutthroats. The burden of this fearful responsibility does not rest with the Governor. He has done all in his power to put an end to the outrages of Henry Berry Lowery and his gang. Upon whom then does the blame rest? It rests upon the Ku Klux Legislature, who deprived the Governor of some of his powers, and repealed the best features of the Militia law of the State. The strictly partisan legislation of that body has crippled the Executive and fastened the gang of outlaws upon the county which they infest.

The Governor has visited Robeson county himself, conferred with the civil authorities and citizens as to the best means to accomplish the extinction of the desperadoes, and promptly seconded the suggestions and line of procedure which was made by the citizens at that time. It was through his efforts that federal troops were sent to Robeson. So contrasted has been the power and authority of the Governor by the Ku Klux Legislature, that had the entire army of convicts in the Penitentiary broken out, the Governor had not authority to offer one cent reward for their apprehension until they had fled the bounds of the State. Who has done this? The Ku Klux Legislature. They abolished every effective feature of the Militia law and now the militia cannot be organized.

They have taken away so much authority from the Governor that he is powerless to adopt effective measures to capture the Lowery or any other gang of outlaws who may be a curse upon the State. Who is to blame for all this? Again we repeat, the Ku Klux Legislature. All the robberies that have been committed, the cold-blooded murders that cry to heaven for vengeance, the agonized families whose homes have been made desolate, the awful terror and gloom which now pervade the doomed county which has fallen a prey to the merciless banditti whose hands are reeking with the best blood of her citizens—these, all these horrors might have been ended and would had not the Ku Klux Legislature weakened the Governor of the State.

Are not the laws of North Carolina despised now for their inefficiency and weakness when, by the acts of the Ku Klux Legislature, a band of cutthroats are allowed to slaughter and overawe an entire community without opposition. The democratic press asks, Who is to blame? Now, they know. Their own Ku Klux Legislature. The "Boys," as they are termed.

Sitting snugly under his own pitch-pine tree a Tarboro' editor lucubrates as below on the deplorable cowardice of Robeson county. It would probably be worth while journeying to Tarboro once to observe him "smile with pity" on his benighted white brethren in the southern part of the State shivering before three niggers. He certainly admits that he "talks very bold" because he is out of danger, and we are fain to believe him since he sticks at the head of his paper, "I am a Southern man of Southern principles," culled from the many odd sayings of Jeff Davis of valorous, petticoat memory. He shows his intelligence, however, by quoting in another part of the paper from a HERALD editorial on the same subject:—

A SOUTHERN SMILE OF PITY.

[From the Tarboro' (N. C.) Southerner, March 21.]

A VALIANT SET.—It is scarcely possible to imagine to what a condition of fear and cowardice the Lowery gang of outlaws have reduced the men in the region where they live and have a being.

Of course, living away from the scene of danger, we can talk very bold; but, nevertheless, we cannot refrain from expressing the belief that the whole reason for the non-capture of these murderers arises from the veriest cowardice on the part of the male population in that section.

The last accounts from the actions of the outlaws are to the effect that a few days since, "when the train on the Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford Railroad arrived at Moss Neck depot, the passengers (probably at least a dozen men) were regaled with a sight of two of the gang of outlaws, Stephen Lowery and Andrew Strong. They had with them as a prisoner of war a correspondent of the NEW YORK HERALD.

Further particulars from the Wilmington papers indicate that either fear or policy combined, placed the whole party, outlaws and passengers, upon the very best footing, as the outlaws, two in number, mixed promiscuously in the crowd of men, and even gave to the conductor certain telegrams to be forwarded, of which this one is a specimen:—

We have captured your correspondent, A. B. Henderson; will not hurt him, but will keep him a week. Boss is not dead.

ANDREW ✕ STRONG.

This man Henderson is reported as having slung across his shoulders a long backwoods rifle belonging to one of the outlaws, and was escorted wherever he went by Stephen Lowery and Andrew Strong."

We must confess that the reading of such statements fills us with the utmost astonishment.

The fact that two men, however desperate and well armed, upon whose heads rested a reward of $30,000, could thus intimidate and browbeat a large number of men is not the least wonderful of the exploits of these desperadoes.

The public must smile with pity at the cowardice of these valiant "passengers" who thus quietly and tamely permitted themselves to become the game and sport of two negro outlaws.

IMPORTANT TO RALEIGH.

[From the Raleigh (N. C.) Daily News, March 22.]

Mr. Cuthbert, the correspondent of the NEW YORK HERALD for Virginia and this State, will take the place of Mr. Henderson, who has been captured by the Lowerys.

A SENSIBLE TENNESSEE PAPER.

[From the Columbia (Tenn.) Herald March 22.]

From a graphic description of Lowery, the famous North Carolina outlaw, and his desperate band, published in Monday's NEW YORK HERALD, we make the following interesting extracts:—

It then copies the first HERALD letter on the Scuffletown bandits. If all the other papers we have quoted had done the same they would have spared their readers much solemn nonsense.

A MURMUR FROM MORMONDOM.

The Salt Lake sheet is ill-natured, but it advertises the HERALD for all that, and in its own small way, without ever being asked. In return we do it a similar service and think it owes us something when the balance is struck.

[From the Salt Lake Herald, March 15.]

A NEW YORK HERALD correspondent, it is said, has been captured by the Lowery gang of robbers in North Carolina. Probably this report is only a HERALD advertisement.

We close our extracts for the present with one from St. Louis. It recognizes HERALD enterprise, and we have no doubt it will be glad to learn that our daring correspondent, although returned, did not come home in a box.

[From the Tri-Weekly Dispatch, St. Louis, March 22.]

A CORRESPONDENT IN LIMBO.

A correspondent of the NEW YORK HERALD went down to the land of the Dismal Swamp to interview the Lowery gang, and now they are interviewing him. [illegible] He was escorted to the railroad station by two of the gang, where he was permitted to forward a message to the HERALD and to the wife of his bosom, which was signed by Stephen Lowery and W. PAST, PRESENT AND PROSPECTIVE.

Speech of Senator Wilson on the Position and Prospects of the Republican Party.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF GRANT.

NEW BRUNSWICK, March 25, 1872.

In this pleasantest of New Jersey towns the republican and democratic parties are about equally matched. It is, undoubtedly, for this reason that the local leaders of the former, such as are loyal to its time-honored traditions and to the present administration of the national government, are early astir with preparations for the coming political fray, which is to determine who shall adorn the Presidential chair for the next four years.

Senator Wilson arrived here late this afternoon, from his home in New England, dusty and travel-worn; but after a few hours of retirement, rest and refreshment at the house of his friend, Professor S. W. Atherton, he appeared, looking fresh, genial and handsome, and even young, but for his smooth, silvery crown of honorable age, before in Greer's Hall, who received him with enthusiastic applause. The crowd was very great, composed of the most respectable citizens of the town.

Senator WILSON was introduced by the Chairman of the meeting, Mr. K. T. B. Spader, and commenced his address, the subject of which was "The Present Position and Prospects of the Republican Party," by saying that in the providence of God it was sometimes vouchsafed to faithful men to give an impulse to human affairs and to confer lasting benefits upon mankind. To achieve such far-reaching results there must be a comprehensive conception of

THE NEEDS OF THE TIMES

and a fearless, unshrinking and unswerving devotion to the duties of the hour. Seldom has it been given to any body of men to accomplish results so far-reaching as have been accomplished by the republican party of the United States during the past twelve years. It was brought into being as a national organization, to resist the extension of human slavery and overthrow the dominating influences of slave power. Defeated in its first efforts it submitted to the will of the nation, appealed to its higher and better sentiments, and in 1860 made Abraham Lincoln President of the United States.

THE SLAVE POWER,

that for sixty years had dictated the policy of the nation, at once raised the banners of rebellion, plunged the nation into a civil war, slew 350,000 of our sons and imposed upon the people a debt that will burden their industries for years. The duty was imposed upon the republican party to suppress that rebellion and to extirpate human slavery, which was its inspiration. It placed immense armies in the field, created powerful navies, and by a series of legislative and executive acts destroyed slavery and overthrew the slave power. When that work was achieved, in the hour of victory its trusted and great leader fell by

THE WEAPON OF THE ASSASSIN.

His successor, inspired by selfish ambition, sought to snatch from the nation the fruits of its immense sacrifices. For four years he struggled to arrest the needed legislation and to defeat the men who had carried the country through the fire and blood of civil war. In that hour of trial the nation instinctively turned to its and made him President of the United States. He did not seek that high position, but that high position sought him. For more than three years he has administered the government. He has been true to the ideas, principles, policy and traditions and history of the republican party.

HIS FOREIGN POLICY

has commanded and now commands the approval of this nation and the respect of all nations. The fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, and the legislation authorized by them, received his unfaltering support, and he has striven by treaties with foreign Powers and by the enforcement of the domestic laws of the country to protect American citizens at home and abroad.

HIS INDIAN POLICY,

originated by himself, has saved to the nation millions of dollars, has impressed and is impressing itself upon the perishing races, and is sanctioned by interest, by justice and by the spirit of Christianity.

HIS FINANCIAL POLICY,

by which $300,000,000 of the national debt have been extinguished, the credit of the country improved and the business interests strengthened, commands the confidence of the nation and extorts the admiration of financial men the world over.

The great measures of

PRESIDENT GRANT'S ADMINISTRATION

are vastly stronger to-day than the republican party of the United States. Nearly all the measures of his administration command the confidence of the country and receive little opposition or criticism.

THE COMING CONVENTION.

A convention is to be held in Philadelphia early in June to nominate a candidate, and popular indications are that General Grant will receive its unanimous support. But whatever those indications may be, any one has a right to be a candidate in that convention and every republican has a right to support whom he pleases. There are those who say that it will be controlled more or less by office holders.

NEARLY ALL THE OPPOSITION to the present administration is founded, not in ideas, principles or public policy, but grows out of the ambition of mere personal preferences and the distribution of governmental patronage.

The administration is the weakest where there is the most patronage and where office holders are most influential. In sections of the country where they are few is the most unity, and there the administration receives the most unanimous support. Whoever is nominated at Philadelphia—whether it be General Grant or any other person—will unquestionably receive the support of

THREE AND A HALF MILLIONS OF REPUBLICANS.

There is to be a convention in conference held at Cincinnati. It is to be hoped that moderate counsels will prevail, and that those who are brought together there will see it clearly to be their duty to continue to act with the republican party. In the past, measured by the most exalted standards, that party has been true to the country, to the rights of man, and has carried in America. It is a liberal and progressive organization. While it adheres to its great policy of the past and remains true to its traditions, it accepts the vital issues of the times as they arise and is brave enough to confess its mistakes and to correct its own errors. The time for conciliation, for moderate counsels, for magnanimity, has come, and it is to be hoped that patriotic counsels will prevail and that the republican party will go into the next Presidential election united and come out of it victorious, and that it will, in the future, as in the past, be true to the country and the popular rights, and that it will continue to hold the reins of government until its ideas of patriotism, freedom, justice, humanity, development and improvement will be the accepted ideas of the nation.

Senator Wilson was frequently applauded. After the delivery of his speech he immediately started for Washington by the eleven o'clock train.

A DISHONEST SERVANT.

Mathilde McArdle, a domestic, was arrested yesterday by Detective Noble, of the Sixteenth precinct, upon complaint of Sarah J. Collis, of 335 West Nineteenth street, charged with stealing a quantity of clothing from her valued at $45. The officer upon searching the prisoner in the station house found thirty-three pawn tickets in her possession, representing different articles of jewelry and clothing. She denied the charge before Justice Cox at Jefferson Market yesterday, but was locked up for trial.

A JERSEY GUILLOTINE.

Frightful Occurrence at Waverly.

A tramp, supposed to be John W. Pratt, of New York, met a horrible fate on the New Jersey Railroad, near Waverly, yesterday morning. About seven o'clock the engineer of the Washington through train observed some dark object lying across the track. He supposed it to be a Newfoundland dog, but on closer examination it proved to be a man. He reversed the engine as quickly as possible, but not in time to save the stranger from an appalling fate. His head was severed from his body and the body itself mangled and mutilated beyond recognition. He was taken to Newark and placed in the dead house there. As near as could be judged deceased was about forty years of age. He had black, thick hair and black whiskers. In his pocket was an [illegible] certificate of membership of the [illegible] Temperance Society of [illegible], New York, dated March 13, 1872, in which was incorporated the name of John W. Pratt.
